Coleman Urges All Citizens To Give

E. P. Coleman, Jr., who is the chairman of the Board of Director's for the Missouri Delta Community hospital, and who has contributed ONE MILLION DOLLARS for improvements, said today that the building fund program should receive the enthusiastic support of ALL citizens in the area. A drive is now underway to raise $842,500 locally for a new wing that is to cost $2,933,000.

Harold Jones, hospital administrator, said "An organization is no stronger than its leadership. The excellence of directorship of the hospital is apparent. Five of the present 24 members of the board of directors are charter members.

The first patient was admitted to the hospital Dec. 1, 1948. The growth pattern of the hospital has been "fantastic." Patient day increases have averaged 10 per cent while laboratory examinations increased 30 per cent each year. During 11 months of 1964 a specific chart of in-patient activity was maintained. Of those 330 days charted, patients were admitted to the hallways 115 days, due to lack of adequate facilities.

New facilities will make available 54 additional beds, making a total of 200 beds in the hospital.

The proposed new addition, when completed, will create a need for additional employes.

Large Tooth Found

ADVANCE -- A large tooth, said to be one of a mastodon, was found recently at a swimming place north of town called "The Block Hole." The tooth--a scissor type measuring four by five inches -- was found by Perry Daniel. His companions were Mike Mashek and Steve Ramsey.

The tooth was taken to State College, Cape Girardeau, where it was judged to have belonged to a mastodon.

The mastodon -- according to the World Book encyclopedia-- was an elephant-like creature with a coat of long hair. It was said to have roamed the plains of Egypt some 35 million years ago. It later migrated to Africa and then to America about thirteen million years ago.

Travelers Appear On Amateur Hour

By CAROL MILLER

"That Rock Island Line, it is a mighty good road." For the Travelers, the Rock Island Line is a mighty good road.

The folk singers-Terry Burke, Sue Foster, Mike Hopkins, and Steve Matthews--recently auditioned for and won an apperance on the Ted Mack Amateur Hour. But their dream might not have come true if it had not been for "that Rock Island Line."

They left Cairo June 4 by train and were to transfer in Chicago to another train for LaSalle, Illinois. There they would meet Mrs. Venita Rich, the sponsor of the Delta Fair contest in Kennett in which the Travelers won their expense-paid trip to New York. Other acts gathered from across the Mid West by Mrs. Rich were to accompany them to New York by bus.

Cotton Producers Attend Meeting

A BATHING SUIT made from cotton, and a second place winner with a $25 prize, won by Miss Carol Gaines, New Madrid county. The winners modeled for the Missouri Cotton Producers Association at Poplar Bluff last night.

POPLAR BLUFF -- More than 300 cotton producers heard national legislators and fiber leaders speak here Friday at the Missouri Cotton Producers Association meeting.

The meeting opened at the Holiday Inn here for a noon luncheon with a short business session of the board of directors and township leaders. George Shelby Jr., Charleston, presided. The call to order and business session was led by James N. Conner, Kennett, executive vice president.

The 17th annual program found an array of national, state and local leaders, including senators Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long of Missouri and George McGovern of South Dakota; Dr. M. K. Horne, National Cotton Council, Memphis; Wilson Tucker, commodity stabilization service, Washington, D. C.; Rep. Paul C. Jones, Kennett.

Fifteen Sew-With-Cotton award winners from New Madrid county, under the leadership of Miss Rebecca Nistendirk, displayed the garments they made.

Two top awards were presented at the banquet by Sen. Long, the first to George Shelby Jr., as the outstanding leader in the Missouri Cotton Producers Association, and to Rep. Paul Jones for his leadership on agriculture in Congress.

Elected to lead the seven-county Cotton Producers Association for the coming year was W. J. Clarkston, Poplar Bluff. Others officers chosen were first vice-president, H. B. Boyd, Campbell; second vice president, Claude Keasler, Parma; third vice president, John Bailey, Portageville; fourth vice president, Jack Tipton, Caruthersville; fifth vice president, Robert S. Matthews, Sikeston; treasurer, Wayne DeLisle, Portageville, and James Conner, re-elected executive vice president.

At the afternoon session Dr. James M. K. Horne Jr., Memphis, Tenn., chief economist, National Cotton Council, showed slides on the high texture of cotton fiber compared with other substitute fibers.

Tucker said, "You can rest assured that your national representatives are ever mindful of the cotton situation, and never a day passes, but what your leaders are showing a decided headway. Our carry-over will be reduced within a few years, averaging over one million bales a year, and increased from this point.

"The value of your crop was $55 million in 1965 and $7 million from seed income, down from the previous year, but for 1966 99 per cent of the cotton growers signed for the program, with 78,000 acres. The bill signed by the president on June 17, will alleviate the cotton planting damage considerably, and a small measure to help the grower. It must be remembered, however, that the consumption is up four per cent, but the exports are down 1 per cent. It is here that I expect to see a great difference, as in the next three years we can expect to export from 17 to 19 million bales, and next year we expect to export almost 6 million bales.

"On other programs in agriculture, 62,000 farmers took part in the A C P program for an income of $9 million; 9,000 farmers received emergency assistance; 8456 cotton farmers, earned over $2 million; 55,000 farmers wheat farmers converted two million acres in 1965, and reduced the production 100 million bushels at a value of $189 million.

"You may ask how these

Jackson Man Killed in Wreck

A 23-year-old Jackson man was killed at 3;15 a.m. this morning when his car went over an embankment and hit a tree three miles south of Jackson on Highway 61.

Killed was Donald E. Wade. The Highway Patrol reported the Wade car was traveling at a high rate of speed, attempted to pass a car driven by Ruby A. Plourde, 45, of Cape Girardeau, skidded and sideswiped the Plourde car.

The Wade car then went over the embankment and hit the tree. Troopers said the car was almost cut in half by the impact. The body was taken to Sparks funeral home at Cape Girardeau.

A Chicago, Ill., man, Royal Mitchell, 51, escaped injury when his car skidded off the road on Highway 60, three miles east of Charleston Friday at 7:30 p.m. Troopers said the Mitchell car was passing another westbound car and skidded into the ditch to avoid hitting an eastbound car.

The Highway Patrol reported seven accidents and eight injuries in southeast Missouri Friday.

The Urbmobile for city travel and the Century Cruiser for inter-city travel are the two drawing board dream cars suggested by Cornell.

A motorist would drive his Urbmobile to the nearest expressway or street where it would come under automatic control all the way to the city parking lot near the motorist's office.

The Century Cruiser is a speedy beast. It would cruise at 100 m.p.h. with acceleration to spare for passing or maneuvering.

A Cruiser would be under full control of the driver. But, says the Cornell report, it would incorporate "all the latest advances in braking, refinement of steering and handling qualities, aerodynamic stability and new instrumentation . . ."

It seems certain that we'll wee many peculiar automobiles in the future.

For example: The Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin asked its female readers for car-building ideas. They suggested cars in Early-American decor; a built-in vacuum cleaner; and a power-driven vertical panel to cut off child noise in the back seat from parents in the front, and clear panels at the bottoms of front doors so drivers can see the curb when parking.

The wildest idea of all, however, may well be an infra-red device attached to a driver's glasses that enables him to push buttons by looking at them. Motorists may be able to steer, actuate turn signals, toot horns, dim lights and even speed up or slow down by looking at buttons on their auto dashboards.

The device has been developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

BLURRING THE ODER-NEISSE LINE

Every peace settlement, it is said, contains the seeds of a future war. Germany's seizure of Alsace-Lorraine in 1871 made another Franco-German conflict inevitable. Placing the entire blame for World War I on Germany helped to bring on World War II. And cession of Germany territory east of the Oder and Neisse rivers to Poland in 1945 has threatened the stability of Central Europe for two decades.

But now the Oder-Neisse issue may be losing some of its explosiveness. At least, the West German government has indicated that it is willing to discuss the question. In an interview printed in the Swiss weekly "Die Weltwoche," June 2, Chancellor Ludwig Erhard hinted that Bonn might renounce claim to the eastern territories as part of the price to be paid for reunification. West Germany is "ready to make sacrifices" to rejoin East Germany Erhard said.

Willy Brandt, mayor of West Berlin, recently told the Social Democratic party convention that he, too, had changed his mind about how to approach reunification. "Formerly I argued that first the division of Germany must be overcome before we can talk about the borders," Brandt said. "Now I feel differently." The first order of business, in his opinion, is to relax tension by disposing of the Oder-Neisse question.

Other West German leaders apparently would go much further. Rainer Barzel, majority leader in parliament and the current favorite to succeed Erhard as chancellor, has proposed that the Soviet Union be permitted to keep troops in a reunified Germany. Moreover, Barzel would confer legal status on the Communist Party if Germany were reunified.

Suggestions like these would have been unthinkable during the regime of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. Today, they are something less than shocking. The winds of change are sweeping across Europe.

SELLS MORE FOOD

A MERCHANDISING executive has declared that "you can sell more food through newspaper advertising than any other media."

"This is why we spend 90% of our advertising dollar in newspapers and 10% in television and radio," said Orville W. Johler, vice-president of Independent Grocers' Alliance (IGA), which he described as the world's largest voluntary food store chain.

"Advertising is newspapers," Johler said at a seminar for IGA advertising managers, "is always more exciting than other media because readers are keyed up, more alert often because of the latest happenings which they read about. This type of exhilaration also provokes people to action more than other media do."

"FABULOUS NEW ERA"

The current era has been characterized by industrial expansion on a vast scale. Record after record has been established -- and then record after record has been broken.

In this soaring economy, the gas industry has been one of the more spectacular leaders, and some new figures from the American Gas Association show it will continue to be. It is now the nation's sixth largest industry, serving 36 million customers, and last year the value of its plants climbed to $26 billion. This year alone gas utilities and pipeline companies throughout the nation expect to spend $1.8 billion on new construction. And the figure for the four years, 1964-67, period is forecast at a staggering $7.2 billion.

These expenditures, says an Association spokesman, are needed not only to better serve these 36 million customers, but to help meet the country's continually expanding energy requirements. And, he adds, they "give striking evidence of the forward strides being made by the gas industry in helping to underwrite the development of a fabulous new era for the consumer and nation."

The taxpaying private industries of this nation, of which gas is typical, have the ability and the desire to bring that era about. Let's all hope their path is not needlessly roughened by an excess of mistaken zeal on the part of government -- the kind of zeal that so often has led to harsh and destructive regulatory policies and to other economic depressants.

WHY NOT PATRONIZE U.S. SHIPS

Rear Admiral Ralph K. James, Ret., of the Committee of American Steamship Lines points out that United States production of very fast liner ships -- 19 knots or more-represents some 75 per cent of world production. And when his Committee's massive ship replacement program is completed in 1975, the American fleet in the liner trade will be the best on the seas.

That is a pleasant picture. But, Admiral James goes on, there are no guarantees that it will come about. And it can only come about if American shippers patronize to a far greater extent than now, our U.S.-flag vessels.

The situation is a serious one. Overall -- including tanker, bulk carrier and tramp shipments -- our merchant ships account for a mere 9 per cent of our carryings. In other maritime nations, by way of contrast, their own ships often carry about 50 per cent of their import-export cargoes. The situation is better in the liner trade-- there American flag shipping accounts for 29 per cent of the tonnage and about 37 per cent of the value. But we can, and must, do much better.

This is certainly not the fault of our shipping lines. They provide the best service on the fastest vessels. Their rates are competitive. They maintain highly-skilled organizations to serve the needs of shippers. Yet our merchant marine is grossly underutilized at a time when more than $40 billion in foreign trade goods flow through our ports each year.

There is more to this than the commercial aspect. Russia is engaged in a huge maritime building program designed to give her domination of the trade routes of the world. This is a part -- an extremely important and menacing part -- of the cold war. But that challenge can be turned back, Admiral James tells us, "If more Americans can be encouraged to ship American..."

WRONG INCENTIVE

James Long, poll editor of the Oregon Journal asked residents of Portland and vicinity: Do you approve of the $7,500 a year pay raise congressmen voted for themselves?

The results, in percentages: Approve 22.7; disapprove 74.5; no opinion 2.8.

Said Mr. Long, "The thing that lifted the eyebrows of most of poll participants was not the raise itself, but the size of the raise and its proportion to the present salary for lawmakers. . . . $22,500 a year to $30,000."

It was pointed out by persons questioned that there is no shortage of candidates for Congress and that there are a number of congressmen who do not deserve such a raise.

If income is to be the incentive for seeking high political office, the future of our republic is on a shaky foundation.

It was almost midnight and the attractive, well-stacked woman had been standing at the bus stop for over half an hour, obviously several martinis past her limit, when up drove a personable - appearing chap with an offer of transportation home. Sliding into the seat beside him, the inebriated miss managed to mumble her address, then slumped drowsily against the fellow's shoulder. Responding to the opportunity, the driver wrapped his free arm around his pretty passenger and pressed her closer to him, proceeding with as personal an appraisal of the terrain as possible without taking his eyes off the road, or his other hand off the wheel.

At first she seemed oblivious to what was going on, but then she came to life, exclaiming, "Man, you're passionate!"

STRENGTH FOR EMERGENCY

A short time ago, Lederle Laboratories, one of the nation's leading manufacturers of drugs, was honored by national, state and local Civil Defense officials. In a special ceremony, high ranking military officers and Governor Rockefeller of New York hailed the firm for its "outstanding" emergency planning.

The reason for this unusual event was that Lederle has conducted a 10-year program of emergency planning designed to assure vital medical products for the nation in case of military attack or natural disaster. It has some 14 buildings which provide protection against blast, shock, heat, light, and flying objects, all located on the company's 550 acre tract in such a way as to be highly decentralized yet easily reached by personnel. The whole purpose has been the establishment of a system where its essential medical products, numbering 400, would continue to be available in the event of national emergency.

Curiously enough, in recent "peacetime" years, the U.S. government has been shaking the foundations of the admittedly vital drug industry by ignoring its earned patent rights to purchase drugs manufactured by companies which have done no research on them and can sell more cheaply.

There has been much misleading criticism of the drug companies, coming from those who conveniently overlook the industry's splendid achievements and purposes. An event such as the award to Lederle should help to clear the air and let the truth emerge.

"If We Knock Ever So Softly, Maybe They Won't Answer!"

Doc. Duncan Says

Most folks that think, think the reason politicians muscled in and took over the schools is they want to brainwash the kids beginning at four years old, to make sure they will accept the one world government and the anti-Christ as God. You see this cross-breed Americans are hard to brainwash. You think the job is well done, then look around and for some reason they have come unglued.

Washington Merry- Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The President of the United States may be a doting daddy as far as his two daughters are concerned, but officially he's against any permanent recognition of father's day. Mothers, no. They are on their own.

Word of this came to light when Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Rep. Joe Resnick, D- N. Y., introduced resolutions putting the United States government on record in favor of fathers.

Sen. Randolph is a director of Big Brothers of the national capital area and wanted not only to honor fathers, but highlight the problem of caring for fatherless boys. This is the goal of Big Brothers, namely, the one man - one boy idea of a Big Brother as a companion for a fatherless boy.

Rep. Resnick was also interested in emphasizing this.

However, all acts of congress, ranging from resolutions to major appropriations bills, must go to the budget bureau for approval. Reason: To keep congressional spending down and make sure an act of congress conforms to the President's policies and budget. So when the father's day resolutions reached the budget bureau, its seriousminded officials took out their pencils and tried to figure how much father's day would cost the nation.

They figured hard. But for the life of them they couldn't figure how father's day would cost President Johnson, or the taxpayers, anything. There was no provision in the resolutions for spending anything, not even speeches made. The resolutions merely proposed that the nation pay tribute on a family-to-family basis to the male head of the family and consider the importance of befriending children who weren't fortunate enough to have fathers.

Even so, the budget bureau was suspicious. Maybe there was a hidden dollar some place behind the resolutions which they didn't see.

Finally, it decided to ok the father's day resolutions for one year only. This would give them time to see whether the expenditure of hidden dough was involved.

ONE SENATOR AGAINST FATHERS

When the resolutions reached the full senate, they had the sympathetic support of Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the Democratic leader, father of a comely Irish Colleen who occasionally, not often, listens to the advice of the senator.

But the resolutions aroused the opposition of Mansfield's assistant Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, who claimed that father's day was for the benefit of merchants.

"Why is it necessary to have a national father's day?" Sen. Long asked.

"The distinguished senator from Louisiana," remonstrated Sen. Randolph, "would not, I am sure, want to have invalidated the legislation which created mother's day. Would he want that act rescinded now by the congress?"

"I am not a mother," replied Sen. Long, "and I do not feel particularly qualified to speak on the subject."

Sen. Randolph rallied to the defense of both fathers and mothers, and after further discussion Sen. Long, with a weather eye on the Dodd hearings and charges of conflicts of interest, concluded: "Insomuch as I am a father and have something of an interest in this matter, I should like to ask to be excused from voting on it."

Other members of the senate, 95 per cent of them fathers, chose to ignore their conflict of interest and voted themselves and the rest of the fathers of the nation a resolution of tribute on father's day.

However, as far as the Johnson administration is concerned, it is on record in favor of fathers for 1966 only, not 1967. Because of the budget bureau, this weighty problem will have to be tackled again next year.

HAIRCUTS AND RESTROOMS

While the budget bureau cast a jaundiced eye at father's day, the House of Representatives cast a jaundiced eye at free haircuts, free bottled water for senators, and other picayunish problems. Members of the House do not get free haircuts or bottled water.

"Is there any money in this bill for free haircuts for spring water?" inquired Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, during debate on the $172 million housekeeping bill for congress.

"So far as I know," replied Rep. George Andrews, D-Ala., "there never has been any money appropriated for free haircuts on this side and neither have we made any money available for mountain water for house members."

GROSS -- "Now, is there any money in this bill for the manning of the automatic elevators in the Rayburn building?"

ANDREWS -- "There is a small amount in the bill, but it is not being used."

GROSS -- "These elevators operate as well, if not better, without being manned. It would be my hope that no one gets the idea that simply because there is money available they should go out and hire operators."

Gross also raised a fuss about the lack of an adequate restroom on the house side for women visitors to the capitol.

"If we can have a car wash on the main floor of the garage in the Rayburn building, I certainly think a women's public restroom should be established on one of the main floors of the house side of the capitol," he complained.

On this point both Democrats and Republicans agreed. Public restrooms for women on the main floor became a bipartisan policy.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

PERILOUS ROAD TO OUTSVILLE

An acquaintance stopped me on the street. "Congratulations," he said.

"About what?"

"The hat."

"What about the hat?"

"Well, so's yours."

"That's what I mean," he replied. "Congratulations to us both. We have the courage to be different."

Now, it is true that we were the only people in sight wearing broad-brimmed straws. Nine out of the ten male passers-by were bare headed and the rest had perched on the tops of their heads these high-crowned things with practically no brims that make you look like a dialect Swede in a burlesque show.

I didn't tell my friend that I sunburn easily and that the hat was my doctor's suggestion. Instead, I basked with him in our superiority over the fashion-cowed rabble. What other excuse is there for a summer hat except shade? We had the moral courage to lean against the winds of current asininity. We were from "Outsville," and proud of it.

BUT this poses a distressing question: How far out of Insville and into Outsville should a man go? Where do you draw the line between forthright defiance of a silly fashion of the moment and an idiotic transgression of normal decorum?

A tired woman slips her shoes off in a darkened movie. She doesn't do it in church, where everyone would notice. The opera diva opens her mouth wide on the big notes and we cry, "Bravo!" But the rest of us must conceal a yawn with our hands. The gentleman still walks to the curbside of his lady, although the splash of mire from the carriage wheels is no longer a problem. Custom. Tradition.

The man who follows a tradition, even an obsolete or foolish one, advertises himself as a player by the rules. The rules are not consistent. The pinch of snuff and the sneeze, which made an 18th Century dandy, would produce a bum today. The appreciative after-dinner belch, de rigeur in the southern Sudan, would horrify the western hostess. But the rule-abiders, in any culture and any age, are people who keep a check-rein on themselves. There's some virtue in it.

THE professional rebels of today are like the evangelical members of antisuperstition societies who run under ladders, break mirrors and cut behind black cats. The rebel tries to break all the rules. If the rule is cleanliness the rebel is dirty. If the rule is a struggle for neatness or beauty the rebel is a studied slob. If Society requires certain standards of decorum the rebel behaves like a goat. He's strictly from Outsville.

But his problem is that he's also in Insville. He is hoping to impress and gain acceptance among other rebels whose rule is no-rule. He is caught in a habit pattern more rigid than that which afflicts the "square." More rigid and more idiotic, for it is contrary to nature for a man or woman to strive for repulsiveness.

THE compulsive crowd-follower is only slightly superior. He checks his common sense and does whatever "they" are doing. "They" are the arbiters of fashion, the "cognoscenti", the "jet set." The skinny-legged lady in the thigh-length skirt, and the fat woman in the Bikini are inadvertent clowns.

Slavish attention to what "they" are wearing or doing or attending gives the unsure personality the comfort of the herd. "They" even represent acceptable habits of thought. Some of the slick magazines have been talking reverently about the "mainstream" of American opinion. If you are out of the "mainstream" you are odd. If you are to the right of it you are very odd, possibly dangerous.

There have been many "mainstreams" of human thought. Four hundred years ago the divine appointment of kings was taken for granted. Three hundred years ago witches were for burning. Two hundred years ago preachers found holy sanction for human slavery. It will be interesting to see how history treats some of the economic and social dogmas in the current "mainstream.'

BUT because the past was often wrong it doesn't follow that all old values and venerable philosophies may be safely junked. True, the Wright brothers did what our ancestors thought impossible, but a lot of Darius Greens flapped their wings futilely as they fell from barn lofts. The trick lies not in junking, but in refinement. There's more to philosophy than beard-growing, and Plato can still think rings around the beatnik.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Victor Reuther Leads ADA Group to Moscow.

Washington, D. C.: -- No one will deny that Victor George Reuther, the younger brother, has courage. He has fought the toughest. And now he is going to Moscow via Warsaw.

There will be searing criticism -- from in and out the labor movement.

Reuther's swift intellectualism makes it certain he is aware that the cascading news coverage will make him one of the world's most famed travelers and will recall an earlier bicycling trip through the Soviet with brother Walter.

During some of Victor's rounds abroad, Walter will be in Brussels, but he will not journey to the East.

The junior (54 - year - old) Reuther will leave here on July 6 as one of the leaders of a band of 37 voyagers gathered by the capital branch of the Americans For Democratic Action.

They have no mission to Moscow.

But Victor Reuther has a mission of his own which will make this a long hot summer for himself, his brother and the high command of American labor.

First, insiders see Victor's trip, coming so soon after the earthy battle between George Meany and Walter Reuther over foreign policy, as a long, high flare signaling the launching of the auto union's offensive against the AFL-CIO's inflexible, anti - Soviet, anti-Peking foreign policy.

The not very subtle hint of all this can be seen in the statement issued on June 16th by Walter Reuther in which he said:

"The leadership and the membership of the UAW, like many other Americans, are deeply disturbed about the growing negative character of AFL-CIO policy in the field of international affairs, of which the withdrawal of AFL-CIO delegates from the current International Labor Organization (ILO) conference is but the latest expression."

This is tough. This is blunt. This is open warfare.

The auto union constitutional convention, it should be noted, called for the recognition of Peking China and its admission to the United Nations.

Furthermore, the Reuthers want not only to "build bridges" to the Soviet bloc, but to construct clover leaves off the highways of history to the labor organizations of the USSR and Eastern Europe. Meany believes there are no such things as unions behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains. He sees them as instruments of the state designed to discipline workers and set high - speed production norms. He's convinced they are under rigid control of the Communist Parties' central committee.

But Victor Reuther, head of the auto union's powerful and well - financed International Affairs Dept., could not care less what Meany thinks. Victor Reuther, as does his brother, wants to exchange labor delegations -- immediately if not sooner. He believes in this international cooperation. For months now the brothers Reuther have been trying to bring over a group of Soviet labor officials. The UAW had a Washington and Detroit itinerary all prepared. There were to be informal briefings and fraternal gatherings. The invitations had gone through the Citizen Exchange Corps, formerly Hostages For Peace.

But at the proverbial last minute, the U. S. State Dept. refused to grant the necessary visas. The AFL-CIO leadership had opposed them.

The official State Dept. rejection of the visa requests paralleled the AFL-CIO's objection: The Russians were no tourists. They were actually a labor delegation. Granting the entry permits would equate Soviet and U. S. unions and give the mission from Moscow unjustified status in global labor circles just at a time when the Communist bloc was pushing for a popular front of all labor.

Meany also had killed off a proposal by John A. Gronouski, U. S. ambassador to Poland, to send some Polish speaking unionists from his home state of Wisconsin to Poland.

Now Victor Reuther will see his old friend Gronouski in Warsaw. It is believed they will again plan to set up a labor exchange in the image of the cultural exchanges.

There is no doubt that Reuther will confer with the leaders of the USSR's All - Union Central Council of Trade Unions. There is no doubt in circles here that he will suggest exchanges between the auto union and the group of labor organizations which support the Reuther position.

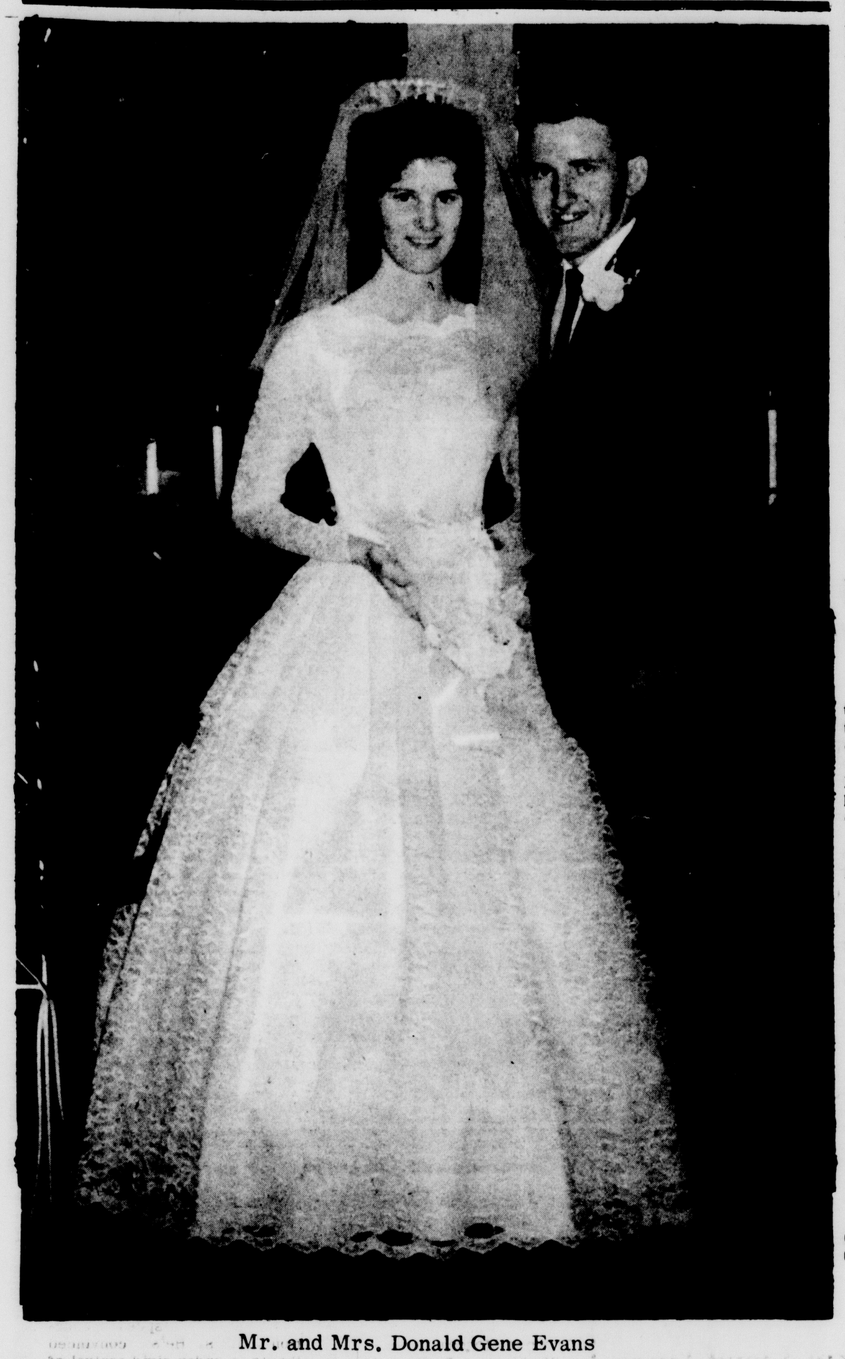

There is no doubt that this will be the issue later this summer when the AFL-CIO's high command meets for a three-day discussion of American labor's foreign policy. Meany and the overwhelming bloc of U. S. labor chieftians will not retreat in their distaste for what they call totalitarian labor fronts set up by the Communist nations.

The Reuthers will then tell the Meany majority to jump into the Potomac -- that is, if it's a polite session -- and then proceed on their own with the bridge building.

The big question is, however, "Who will control the pontoon to the White House?"

Rebecca Diane Meeks Pledges Vows With Donald G. Evans

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Meeks, 305 Illinois Ave., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Evans of Kennett.

The Rev. Al Bareson read the vows of the double ring ceremony at 8 p.m. before the altar lighted with candles in a large candelbra behind an arch of greenery. A basket of white gladioli appointed each side of the arch.

Mrs. Elmer Poage, organist, accompanied Mrs. Joe Fox, soloist, as she sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Prayer" as the couple knelt on the white satin prie dieu for the benediction.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin Chantilly lace covered gown. The bodice featured long tapered sleeves that came to points over the hands. A satin bow accented the back center of the dress. Her veil was a crown of pearls and sequins encircled with white net.

Barbara McRoy, friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Revelle Garrison and Merletta Hays, also friends of the bride, were bridesmaids. Debbie Meeks, sister of the bride, was flower girl and Mike Evans, brother of the groom was ring bearer.

The reception was held in the community room of Security National Bank. The bride's table was covered with a blue table cloth. A three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple centered the table. A crystal punch bowl appointed each end. White candles in gold holders decorated each side of the cake. A wedding bell hung above. Nuts and mints were also served.

Carnival Time Offers Theme For Cookies

Have you ever wandered around a carnival, looking at the sights, munching peanuts? It's readily understandable how these cookies were inspired.

The flavors of lard and brown sugar give an especially tempting cooky, points out home economist, Reba Staggs. Like frosting on the cake are the Spanish peanuts which give a delightful crunchiness to the cookies.

Carnival Cookies

1 cup lard
1½ cups brown sugar
3 cups sifted enriched flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups Spanish peanuts
Sugar

Cream lard and brown sugar. Sift together flour, soda and salt. Add eggs, vanilla and sifted ingredients to creamed mixture. Stir in peanuts. Shape into balls about the size of a walnut. Place about 2 inches apart on ungreased cooky sheet. Flatten with a water glass wrapped in a damp towel. Sprinkle with granulated sugar. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Yield: 5½ dozen.

Astrodome Jinks To Cardinals

The Kansas City Athletics launched a late inning drive last night to nudge the Cleveland Indians 7-5 despite Rocky Colavito's two home runs and five runs batted in.

Elsewhere the St. Louis Cardinals were stunned in the first inning and dropped a 4-1 decision to the Houston Astros in the Astrodome.

The A's bats were silent until the sixth when they pushed across four runs. They added single runs in the next three innings paced by outfielder Mike Hershberger, who wound up with four hits in five trips.

Jim Gosger, Danny Cater, Dick Green and Phil Roof each had two hits for Kansas City. Lew Krausse gained his fourth win against three setbacks.

Cleveland's Colavito rapped his 12th and 13th homeruns and added a single to account for all the Indians' runs. The outfielder's bid for a third homer was turned into an out when Gosger reached over the fence to grab the ball.

Houston jumped on Cardinal starter Nelson Briles for three runs in the first inning and coasted to victory behind Larry Dierker, who scattered nine hits in his final appearance before two weeks of Army reserve duty.

The Cards scored their lone run in the third on singles by Lou Brock and Phil Gagliano and infield outs by Curt Flood and Tito Francona.

Briles absorbed his sixth loss against two wins.

St. Louis will send Ray Washburn 4-3, against the Astros' Mike Cuellar 5-0 tonight at Houston.

OCEANPORT, N. J. AP --

KANSAS CITY AP -- The Kansas City Athletics today acquired Jim Duckworth, a right-handed pitcher, from the Washtinton Senators for the $20,000 waiver price, bringing the A's roster to the 25-man limit.

Duckworth has been used mostly in relief this season and has an 0-3 record.

Duckworth's move to Kansas City completed a deal that sent first baseman Ken Harrelson to Washington.

LAWRENCE AP -- The Kansas Jayhawks will open their home basketball season on Dec. 3, when they play against Xavier University, Coach Ted Owens announced Friday.

The Jayhawks, defending Big Eight champions, will play their first game on Dec. 1, meeting Arkansas at Fayetteville.

Money will be awarded to each division winner and one of the largest turnouts of cars ever to run at the strip is expected, with such cars as "The Sharecropper", Black Trash, Little Eva and "The White Goast Mustang."

A large crowd is expected, time trials start at 12 noon (EST) with eliminations at 2 p.m.

The ferret, a domestic breed of the wild polecat, is in danger of extinction in the United States because the prairie dog, its main source of food, has almost disappeared. Ferrets have been used since the days of the Romans in destroying rats and other vermin and in driving rabbits from their burrows. The ferret's hold on quarry is as obstinate as a bulldog's.

East Prairie Swimmers Play It Cool

EAST PRAIRIE -- A perennial summer favorite in any town is the swimming pool. On Tuesday a Daily Standard reporter-photographer visited the East Prairie swimming pool. About 100 persons a day use the pool facilities, Bill McKinley, pool manager, noted. Three regular and two alternate lifeguards supervise the swimmers. The pool is open 1-8 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to noon and 1-8 p.m. Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

THERE ARE many variations of diving techniques. The easiest -- as demonstrated by Sandra Colson, 16, -- is to stand at the edge of the pool, bend over and fall into the water.

MAYBE IF I keep flapping my arms, I can clear that fence.

YOU DON'T have to know how to swim to have a good time at the pool. Janet Mainord, 17, splashes water on Laura Mainord, 2. Janet will be a freshman at Murray State University at Murray, Ky., this fall.

MID-YEAR AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK OUTLINED

About January 1, I devoted an article to Missouri agricultural outlook for 1966. Since that time, a number of changes and questions have developed as far as agriculture is concerned. Wheat, which has been a surplus crop, is now in considerable demand. Soybeans were a good price, and although the outlook was good, I think prices are better than anyone expected. The Missouri cotton acreage was reduced 25 per cent by acreage limitations. Much of the acreage upon which farmers had planned to plant cotton, corn, and other crops will now be devoted to soybean production due to unfavorable weather. Consequently, we will have a considerably larger acreage of soybeans than anyone had anticipated. For these and other reasons, many farmers have been wondering how various aspects of agriculture would fare during the remainder of the year. Just recently, we received our Mid-year Outlook from our agricultural economists so I would like to briefly summarize their predictions for most of the agricultural commodities produced the year.

As far as beef cattle are concerned, fed cattle prices are expected to continue under pressure through June; however, some improvement in price is forecast for June and July if cattle feeders continue marketings at a rate which will not permit a build-up in weights. If they continue to market cattle at heavier weights as they did during late April and May, this will keep pressure on prices through the summer and thereby retard any price increase.

Hog marketings during late April and early May were near the level of a year earlier, and June marketings are expected to be near the 1965 level. Following this, a five to eight percent increase is indicated for July and August. Hog prices will probably show a slight increase from late May levels and are expected to peak at weekly average prices of $26.00 per cent for 200-220 pound barrows and gilts at National Stockyards in June. Then, pressure from larger marketings should result in a downward trend in late June or July.

Milk production during the January-through-April period averaged about four percent less than production during the same period of 1965. Production during 1966 is expected to be two to five per cent below that of last year. Milk prices are expected to be five to nine per cent higher throughout the 1966 marketing year than they were during the 1965 marketing year.

Wheat disappearance including both domestic use and exports for the 1965-66 marketing year which ends June 30 is expected to be around 1600 million bushels. This would reduce our wheat carryover on June 30 to 550 to 560 million bushels -- the smallest since 1957. Wheat prices are expected to remain above the price support loan rate during the harvest season, and the average price received by farmers during the 1966-67 marketing year will exceed the price of $1.34 per bushel estimated for 1965-66.

A record crop of soybeans is indicated by a number of signs including increased price supports, larger exports, governmental regulations permitting beans to be planted on feed grain areas, the expected increase in soybean acreage due to farmers failure to get corn, cotton, and other crops planted due to unfavorable weather. The total supply of soybean oil in the U.S. is expected to increase about five percent this year. Exports are running about the same as last year and should increase in the near future. The reduction in the acreage of cotton produced will mean that a much lower volume of cottonseed oil and meal will be produced which will lend considerable encouragement to soybean markets. With all factors considered, the minimum soybean production will be above the 900 million bushel mark. The estimated carryover of 40 to 50 million bushels of soybeans at the end of this marketing year is slightly above the 30 million bushel carryover of last year but not enough to affect prices for the remainder of the marketing year. Soybean prices are now above $3.00 at Missouri terminals, and indications are that they will not fall below this figure in the near future.

Egg prices are expected to decline seasonally and will be close to last year's prices until late summer. Increased production this fall due to the big increase in pullet placements will decrease the usual seasonal price rise with fourth quarter prices well below last year.

The immediate price outlook for broilers is bright but prices are expected to be lower after Labor Day as supplies of turkey and pork will be greater.

Extension Center News

By Glenn Patton

How much can I afford to pay for additional farm land? We hear this question many times during the year. The following points are suggested as a guide to help determine the advisability of buying more acres.

FIRST, decide the probable cropping system you would use on the land. Use expected prices for the crops to be grown and add the income from each of the crops to get the total gross receipts or income.

SECOND, estimate as best you can the costs for each of the crops to be grown. Records on your own land would help to determine the cash costs connected with each crop. These costs would include soil treatments, seed, pesticides, harvesting, gas, oil and a charge for the additional labor required.

Then THIRDLY, decide if the additional land will likely affect the net returns on your present farm operation. With the same equipment you may be able to handle the extra acres, but if planting and harvesting is done over a larger period, this may reduce slightly your current crop yields. So if such a decrease may happen, then the dollar amount of this reduced yield should be added to the cost of operating the land you are considering purchasing.

The FOURTH consideration is to subtract the estimated costs from the gross receipts of the proposed cropping plan. If you included labor as one of the annual costs, the returns would be for management and risk. Next, capitalize the net returns you are willing to accept on the investment. If you could earn 5% by investing your money in some other way, perhaps this is the rate to use. Thus a 5% return divided into the expected net returns per acre would give you the total amount the land is worth to you based upon how the land will be used and your expected costs in obtaining the production. One other big consideration is that of the extra operating money needed to farm this land. Can you make arrangements for this and not restrict your present operation? It may be wise to line up any additional operating credit needs before going ahead with the land purchase.

Last but not least, if you purchase the additional land, carefully estimate payments for principal and interest and allow a little margin for an occasional poor year.

Place for Dancing

The term orchestra is originally derived from the Greek which meant a place for dancing. In the ancient Greek theater, dancers and instrumentalists performed in a semicircle between the audience and the stage.

flammable material from near furnace or heating ducts. This can be done much more easily now than after the heating system is turned on again this fall.

Timely Tips

A FASHION HINT FOR WOMEN

What kind of clothes would a woman with so-called middle age spread select? A large abdomen and disphragm is associated with middle age spread, as the figure gets less exercise and fat accumulates in the least exercised areas of all, the abdomen and diaphragm. People of all ages may have this problem because it is also caused by poor posture and sagging muscles. This figure problem can be corrected by cutting out extra snacks, getting the right kind of exercise, straightening up posture; or wearing foundation garments to flatten the bulge.

"The next step is to look for clothing styles that will modify the abdominal curve." Perhaps the most important thing a woman with this figure problem to remember is not to wear clothes too tight. If she would have a pleasing figure silhouette, dresses that show signs of strains across the middle are dead giveaways to a large abdomen and diaphragm. Think about the appearance of a too-tight skirt on a figure with a prominent abdomen, when seen from the side. Even on a perfect figure a skirt that is too tight is not attractive, let alone a figure with a protruding abdomen.

It is just as important to have a loose easy fit in the bodice too. If the bodice looks like its under strain, it will call attention to that area. A dress which exposes every bulge of the diaphragm and has tightness under the arm contributes to an all over too-tight appearance. Another dress may be worn by the same figure and be more attractive to look at if it has a loose bloused bodice and the tightness taken out of the armhole area.

Garments that end at the hipline are certainly to be avoided, and are especially bad if the colors contrast as in a black skirt and white blouse. Suit jackets that end at the fullest part of the hips should also be avoided.

Most up and down lines are flattering to the figure with large hips as they add height and decrease from the width of the figure. One frequent way that women with large hips use vertical lines is with pleated skirts. If the pleats are well spaced, they will be flattering. However, knife pleats are too evenly spaced to be slimming. They are so monotonous they carry the eye across them and make the hipline appear even wider.

Diversified Family

The deer family is greatly diversified in size, ranging from the massive moose, which may grow seven feet tall at the shoulders and weigh up to 1,400 pounds, to the pudu of the Chilean Andes, which weighs up to 24 pounds and stands only 13½ inches at the shoulders.

LOATHSOME RATS

Rats have been loathed and feared by people, especially since the outbreak of the Bubonic Plague in Europe in the 14th century.

People don't fear rats as much today as in the past because rats don't pose as much of a threat to human life. This is assuming that we continue to keep them in a semi-controlled state.

However, rats are loathed as much today as ever. Even if you exclude possible health problems, rats are still lowly loathsome critters. Food seizures in the U.S. by Federal Food & Drug Administration inspectors from April 1962 through March 1963 involved 151 seizures of 3,930,934 lbs. of food valued at $210,435.92. Of this, 413,021 lbs. valued at $69,961.10 was destroyed; 3,517,913 pounds valued at $108,549 was converted to animal feed, etc.; and fines amounted to $31,925. This says nothing about the millions of dollars of animal feed destroyed, damaged or contaminated by these thieves of the night each year. With these kinds of losses it is time to declare war on rats.

In order to win any war it is necessary to know something about the characteristics, traits, and habits of your enemy.

Armed with this knowledge, you are in a much better position to attack them at their weakest point.

PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS AND HABITS

Rats are color blind and their world is composed of various shades of gray. Vision is restricted in rats to several feet. However, they can detect movement at considerable distances. Well-developed senses of smell and taste aid them in avoiding poorly-prepared toxic baits. Hearing is exceptionally good and they can apparently recognize sounds of higher frequency than the average human ear.

The organs of touch are very sensitive hairs in the whiskers and around the body which explains why rats like to run next to walls. These sensory organs assure them that no danger can approach from that side thus counter-balancing the inadequateness of their eyesight. Regular travel routes taken by rats are readily recognized by dark greasy marks left by the animals. Rats are afraid of anything new. Even the displacement of a familiar object will disturb them for some time.

Rats are good swimmers. They will sometimes swim through sewer lines and enter homes through floor drains. It is not uncommon for them to climb sewer pipes as high as the second floor and emerge from toilet stools through the water seals. A large rat can reach vertically 18 inches. With a running start, he can jump 3 feet or more and from a standing start about 2 feet. He can jumpa horizontal distance of 8 feet while dropping less than 14 feet. Rats have been known to fall to the ground from a four-story building without apparetn building without apparent harm. It is possible for young rats to get through openings 1/2 inch in diameter.

The front incisor teeth of a rat grow at the rate of 5 inches a year. Therefore, the rat must gnaw to live. If the new growth is not worn down by constant gnawing, the teeth will curve back in the form of tusks and the animal will die of starvation. Rats can gnaw through lead pipes, work through 3 inches of poorly-mixed concrete, cut through oak planks or sun-dried bricks.

While the Norway rat is primarily a burrowing animals, it can climb when necessary. However, it prefers to live in burrows that are from 8 to 18 inches below the surface of the ground. A long established colony may have a maze of tunnels extending the length of a city block. In light sandy soil, they have been known to burrow as deep as 6 feet.

Rats usually start their search for food and water after sunset each day. They apparently feed twice during the night; once shortly after dark and again in the early morning. The average adult rat needs 3/4 to 1 ounce of dry food and 1 1/2 ounces of water every 24 hours. Without food, they will start to weaken in 3 to 4 days, but without water, weakness sets in after about 1 to 2 days.

Rats generally travel over a wider area but their movements are also correlated with the sufficiency of food, shelter, and water in their immediate vicinity. Rats that are disturbed, however, may move as much as 4 miles in the space of a week.

Rats will take almost any food that either man or domestic animals eat, which explains the great ease with which they adapt themselves to almost any environment. While they can thrive on garbage, decaying meat, and other spoiled foods, rats prefer choice, clean and fresh food.

CONTROL

The best control of rats is to take away the food and shelter that permits them to survive. Traps, gases, and poisons will only temporarily halt a growing rat population.

USE OF ANTICOAGULANT POISONS

Warfarin, Pival, Fumarin, Diphacinone, and PMP are all known as "anticoagulant poisons" because they prevent the normal clotting of blood and cause rats and mice to die by internal bleeding. All of these poisons are available in the form of ready-made baits. Some may be purchased as concentrates for home-made mixtures.

A single dose of either of these anticoagulant poisons will not ordinarily kill unless a very large amount is consumed. They are most effective when taken in small amounts for over five feedings one or two days apart. Thus, ample quantities of bait should be made available for two weeks or more, since some individual rats and mice may not eat it when first exposed.

BAIT PLACEMENT

For RAT CONTROL, place bait at or near places where rats are accustomed to feed. Use shallow pans, preferably not more than ONE-HALF INCH high. If the bait is in a bag, tack one end down, and to hasten acceptance, make a small cross slit in the bag. Remember that bait must be continuously available to rats. CHECK PLACEMENTS DAILY or at not more than two-day intervals and replenish the supply as needed.

GARDEN TOMATOES

What kind of a tomato crop will you have this year? This is a question we will not be able to answer for another four to six weeks. But the care you give your tomatoes the next four weeks -- the month of June -- will largely determine the yields and quality you will receive.

Tomato performance depends on heredity and environment. Heredity involves the type of plant, kind of fruit, ability to set blossoms, and some disease resistance, among other factors. Environment involves light, water, soil, fertilizer, temperature, insect control, and disease prevention.

We have already made the decision as to heredity when we selected the tomato variety or hybrid we have in our garden. I hope this has been a wise selection.

However, whatever variety we have chosen, performance will depend largely on the "environmental care" it receives during June.

Since our season is a little late this year, there is still time to consider pruning tomatoes. More and more gardeners are finding the advantages of planting fewer tomatoes and staking, tying, and pruning. Benefits include earliness, more uniform production, cleaner fruit and thus better quality, and ease in spraying and harvesting.

Many devices have been "invented" to prune or train tomato plants. Some are rather ingenious. Some are elaborate. But the simplest, and perhaps still the most inexpensive, is a 1 x 2 inch stake, 6 feet long, pointed at one end.

Drive in the stake about four inches to the side of the plant. Place the stake in the row so it won't interfere with cultivation. Drive it deeply enough to anchor it firmly. One or two stems of the tomato plant will be traned to this stake. Stems should be tied to the stake with a soft cord of suitable material that will give support, yet not cut into the tomato plant.

Pruning is simply removal of suckers or side shoots. Suckers or side shoots arise at the point of attachment of each leaflet branch to the main stem. Remove suckers when they are three or four inches long. A simple outward and downward movement will easily remove them. Do not cut them out with a knife, you can transmit diseases by this method.

If you want to prune to the two-stem method, allow the sucker that grows just below the first flower cluster to form the second stem. Then prune each stem.

Fertilizers are important during the period after fruit set. You can stimulate growth and increase yields by applying nitrogen fertilizers to your tomatoes during the latter part of June. Use one pound of ammonium nitrate per 100 feet of row, or one rounded tablespoon per plant. Scatter the fertilizer around the base of the plant, but at least 12 inches from the stem. Do not get fertilizer on the foliage.

Disease prevention is most important during June. This is early blight time, Septoria leaf spot can also become a problem. Regular weekly spraying of zineb, maneb, or captan is highly recommended. Use two tablespoons per gallon of water. Be sure to spray the undersides of leaves.

It would be advisable to add an insecticide to your fungicide spray during the latter part of June and early July to prevent serious damage from tomato fruitworm and tomato hornworm. Use either carbaryl (Sevin) methoxychlor, or TDE. Follow directions on the label.

Finally, provide your tomatoes with adequate moisture. This can be effected by rainfall, irrigation, weed control, and mulching.

Weed control is important to prevent moisture loss and to avoid competition for light and air circulation around the plants. Mulching will control weeds and also reduce surface evaporation of moisture. A mulch will also allow for easier penetration of rainfall or irrigation water.

SUMMER SAFETY HINT

Vacation time is almost here and everyone is looking forward to an enjoyable summer. Will it be an enjoyable summer for you? Unfortunately many will be victims of accidents of one kind or another during the next few weeks. Accidents never take a vacation.

We are actually safer today from accidents than we were many years ago according to statistics. But the fact remains that we can still do a lot to make our homes and communities safer places to life.

Here are five hints that you can follow as your contribution to safe living. Look around -- is your basement, garage, or steps leading from one floor to another an obstacle course? Are these areas piled high with material which could cause a fall or permit a fire to start? How about the area around other buildings? Are these areas full of litter and junk just waiting for someone to be careless?

The second hint concerns your highway driving habits. Is your car always kept in good mechanical order? Do you keep the windshield clean at all times? Is your driveway designed so that you have good visibility in both directions when entering the street or highway? Do you watch your speed and always adjust it to the road and driving conditions? Do you watch for slow moving vehicles, such as farm tractors, at all times? Check on your driving habits and see if you can't make some definite improvements.

Since summertime is almost here, many of us will want to spend more time out of doors. The third hint concerns water safety habits such as: never swimming alone, always wearing a life preserver when in a boat, and getting up to date on artificial respiration.

If you work with farm requipment there are several questions to ask yourself. Do you ever clean or adjust machinery while it is running? Do you have your vehicles properly marked for highway travel? The extra time it takes to be safe is time well spent.

The fifth safety hint concerns protection against fire. While it is true that our furnaces and heating equipment are not in use now, it will be time to use them again before we know it. It's a good idea to check all heating equipment, clean and repair chimneys, examine electric power supply lines, and remove any

CONTROLLING COCKLEBURS IN SOYBEANS

If there's a common problem among soybean producers . . . it's the annual problem of cocklebur control. Some of these farmers are asking for control help.

M-U Extension Weed Control Specialist L. E. Anderson says there is no best way to control cocklebur in soybeans because situations differ on individual farms.

Cultivation is effective in controlling cocklebur between the rows. . . but it does not get the plants growing in the row itself. Pre-emergents Amiben and sodium P-C-P will control the cocklebur that germinate near the soil surface . . . .but are less effective in controlling seedlings that originate from seeds germinating deeper down in the soil.

A post-emergence application of 2,4-D butyric acid made between early and mid-bloom will control many of the cocklebur. . . .but some injury to the soybeans will result.

Unforfunately, each method of control has its limitations and no single course of action will give complete control of cocklebur in soybeans.

FLY CONTROL IN DAIRY BARNS

M-U Extension Dairymen say good fly control in dairy barns starts with good sanitation both outside and inside the barn. It also means that fly control measures such as baits and lavicides should be started before the fly population has built up.

M-U Guide 7000 . . . "Fly Control on Dairy Cattle" gives complete information about control measures of various insects. You can get a copy at your County University Extension center.

When spraying be sure directions on the container are followed to the letter. Baits are effective if started early before fly population is built up and then continued throughout the season.

ANTI-BLOAT DRUG HAS BEEN DEVELOPED

The discovery of a new drug for prevention of legume bloat is expected to result in considerable savings to farmers and ranchers, says Melvin Bradley, MU extension livestock specialist.

The new drug, poloxalene, developed at Kansas State University, has been found to be 100 per cent effective in preventing legume bloat, says KSU.

Legume bloat, one of the causes of livestock losses, is brought on by excessive foaming of rumen contents of dairy and beef cattle, and sheep. Poloxalene is a anti-foaming agent. It is marketed under the trademark, "Bloat Guard."

Bradley says use of the new drug will make it possible for farmers and cattlemen to more widely use good legumes as pasture.

To meet the needs of cattle producers, an anti-bloat product had to meet several requirements such as:

It had to prevent bloat for at least 12 hours in animals fed green legumes. It had to act rapidly, be palatable, and economical enough for general use.

It could not leave any residue in milk or body tissues, or cause any bad effects on health, reproduction, rumen function, feed intake, or milk quality or quantity.

Kansas State University says poloxalene satisfied all these demands in tests in various sectors of the country including Kansas, Montana, Iowa, Illinois, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

"Bloat Guard" is a dry product. It can be spread over grain as a top dressing. If it is fed to cattle a few minutes before they are pastured or are fed freshly cut legumes, bloat will be prevented.

Animals weighing 1,000 or more pounds receive 20 grams of the drug per day. Smaller animals receive 10 grams per day.

Perpetual Silence

Central Australia's Warramunga people require all female relatives of a deceased male to remain silent for a year or two as a form of mourning. The restriction includes remote kin and thus most tribal women usually are condemned to perpetual silence, so they become proficient in sign language.

Computers Are Being Accepted

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- Farmer acceptance of the idea of using computers to solve farm management problems has been outstanding, reports Tom Brown, extension agricultural economist at the Univesity of Missouri.

Brown and Myron Bennett, farm business management specialist, have conducted meetings in Carroll, Saline, and Chariton Counties to explain a pilot program of the University that will provide farmers with computer help.

The limit of 50 farmers enrolled for the first year operation of a Farm Business Management Assn. is fast being reached, Brown reported.

At a meeting in Keytesville Wednesday night, 10 Chariton County farmers enrolled in the association.

A week earlier, at a meeting in Marshall, 10 Saline County farmers indicated interest in signing up on the computer programs.

County extension directors in the three county area indicated other farmers have called and told them they want to sign up.

Bennett will start working with the farmers in the association July 1.

The actual start of the farm business analysis and other features of the computer program will be started January 1, Bennett said.

Farmers who want to sign up after the limit of 50 members is reached this year will be put on a waiting list for next year, Bennett said. At that time 25 additional members will be enrolled.

By the third year, the association will be up to 100 members.

In the pilot program, farmers are paying a membership fee of $150 a year. This is about half the expected cost, Bennett said.

The rest of the cost is being taken care of by the University and the local county extension councils.

The program will provide an individualized electronic accounting system to farmers, Bennett said. Information gathered in the system will be used on the farm to make it more profitable.

In explaining the program, Brown said, that when a farmer runs short of time to get his field work done, he can buy a bigger tractor to help him get more done in the same amount of time.

When a farmer ran short of management time there has been little he could do. But now, computers can help him make more and better decisions. The computers advantage is that it can quickly gather facts and figures into usable form. From this information, decisions on the farm business can be made.

POINTERS FOR PLEASANT TRAVELING

Summer time is vacation time. Do you plan to travel to a lake, the mountains, or to visit relatives?

Have plans well made before leaving home. Encourage cooperation of the family in keeping finances within the bounds you have established. Know how much money you can spend and decide, as a family, how to get the most pleasure from it. Young people will have a greater appreciation for money if they handle some of it, so have an understanding of who is to do what before you leave home.

Assign responsibilities for certain jobs while traveling, such as packing the luggage, emptying the litter bag, acting as navigator, paying toll charges, tidying the car, keeping expenses of the trip, etc.

Travel light! Try to anticipate the type of clothing you will need so you can keep the amount to a minimum. You may be able to wear old clothing that can be discarded along the way for no one will know your hose had a big runner when you put them on!

Laundering need not be a problem. You can do a bit of exploring while you patronize the coin laundry.

Games, toys, a thermos of water, snacks, and a pillow are standard equipment for the younger set and may be appreciated by adults, too. A plastic bag with a damp washcloth is a must when children are part of the cargo.

Buy several pairs of hose, stockings and socks that match rather than one pair of a kind. Saves time sorting. Even the youngest member of your family can "pick out his." Saves money, too!

Choose clothing that doesn't require a lot of care---especially ironing.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I can't get mail at home because my mother has X-ray eyes that can read right through envelopes, if you know what I mean. Please answer immediately as I'm clutched.

I am 16 years old and my boy friend Hank is 17. What I need to know right away is if a girl can catch acne from a boy. We are on the verge of doing some rather heavy necking and I want to know what the risks are. Rush your advice as I have a date with Hank for Saturday night. -- IN SEARCH OF INFORMATION

Dear In Search Of: No, you cannot catch acne from Hank but OTHER things can happen which would make acne seem like small potatoes. My advice to you is to cool it, Sister.

Dear Ann Landers: Too much pride can be deadly -- as you have said so often in your column. I wish I had been wise enough to take your word for it because now I am choking on my pride.

A few years ago I was in love with a wonderful man. I know he loved me, too. He showed it in everything he said and did. He was kind and thoughtful and decent and greatly respected by everyone who knew him.

So what was my problem? He was about one inch shorter than I and of slight build. We never discussed it but I am sure I weighed more than he did.

I always wanted to marry a broad-shouldered, husky, brute of a man -- someone I could look up at. My girlhood dream was to be carried into the bedroom on my wedding night.

Well, I married a husky, handsome brute and now I realize that the little guy is a lot bigger than my husband will ever be. Please print my letter for the benefit of others who haven't yet made the decision. -- NEW HAVEN FOOL

Dear New Haven: Here's your letter and thank you for having written it. When the word comes from the person who has been there it packs a double wallop. Are you listening, students?

Dear Ann Landers: Several years ago you said something in your column that I liked so much I cut it out and carried it in my wallet until it became yellowed with age and I could no longer read it. It went something like this: "Children need examples more than they need critics."

Our children were small then and both my husband and I tried to follow that advice. I am happy to say it has paid off.

Our two sons behave so much like their dad that it is comical. Of course it is flattering to dad when he sees his children trying to imitate him. And I feel the same when my little girl, now seven, pretends she is me when she feeds her dolly.

I wish you would re-emphasize the importance of parents setting a good example for their children. We all need to be reminded of these homey truths from time to time. -- LEARNED FROM YOU

Dear Learned: Since the clipping has been discarded I'd like to supply you with another one for your wallet. It expresses the same idea and the man who said it was Francis Quarles, 'way back in 1635.

"If thou desire to see thy child virtuous, let him not see his father's vices. Examples direct more than precepts; such as thy behavior is before thy children's faces, will their behavior be behind your back?"

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hearnes Wants Boating Safety

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has issued an appeal to boaters to join with the Missouri Boat Commission and other enforcement agencies in promoting safety afloat on Missouri waters.

"Safety of our boaters on Missouri waters is of utmost importance," he said, "and requires suitable and continuing programs in education and enforcement to help save lives and prevent boating injuries and damage."

"In this proclamation, he named July 3 -- 9 as Safe Boating Week in Missouri and called upon all recreational boaters to help promote safety during the special observance, "as well as throughout the year."

The Governor urged public cooperation in safety programs of the Boat Commission, the United States Coast Guard, the American Red Cross, and the Supplementary work of Yacht Clubs, Coast Guard Auxiliary groups and Power Squadron Organizations."

"Meanwhile, Acting Executive Secretary, John Buford, requests boaters to, "use common sense in operating your vessels and always stress safety among your passengers."

"There is plenty of room for everyone on our lakes and rivers," he said, "adding that Missouri boaters can really enjoy cruising, but they must cooperate in observing the laws and regulations on boating."

Classes for the second summer term begin July 19.

Street Improvements OK'd at East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE -- Mayor Ed Felts has announced this week that the city has approved resolutions declaring the necessity for the construction of hot mix asphalt paving plus soil cement base and concrete curbing for four streets within the city limits.

The streets named in the resolutions were Lincoln Street from Martin to the Railroad tracks and from Pine Street to Highway 80, Welborn Road from North Street to Traylor Road, Bill Pope Road to North Street to Traylor Road and Traylor Road from Wellborn Road to Bill Pope Road.

The nature and scope of the improvements is estimated at a cost of $5.39 per lineal foot on Pine Street down to $5.06 per lineal foot of abutting property on the other three streets, to be charged against lots and tracts of land abutting the improvements is to be made by funds from special tax bills and special assessments to the property owners along the improvement.

The mayor explained that this manner of financing the construction is because, in the opinion of the Board of Aldermen, the general revenue fund of the city is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure of this size to pay for the improvement.

Landowners will have five years in which to pay for their share of the cost of the improvement and the work will be put up for bid with no bid being acceptable that does not come within the $5.39 per lineal foot rate.

Mayor Felts also pointed out that should the city undertake this project on its own it would only be able to improve possibly four blocks per year with the question as to which surfacing the work begins on becoming a controversial issue. Drainage tile necessary will be financed by the city and will not be charged to the property owners.

According to Mayor Felts this is the general procedure of street building as authorized by the state legislature and is the same process employed by neighboring towns of Charleston and Sikeston in their building program.

Army Finds New Remedy For Malaria

By JOHN T. WHEELER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army medical researchers reported today a major breakthrough in the fight against malaria, next to the Viet Cong the most savage enemy American troops face in Viet Nam.

A spokesman for the surgeon general's office said diaminodiphenylsulfone (DDS), a drug long used in treating leprosy, was found in Viet Nam field tests to cut in half the number of men who are stricken by malaria.

Soldiers who receive the drug but still come down with the disease should be able to return to duty in two or three weeks, instead of the present six to eight weeks. Chances of a relapse should be slashed from 40 per cent to 4 per cent.

Last year 1,801 U.S. troops were stricken by malaria with 63,035 man days lost. The latest complete monthly figures which fluctuate widely show that one of every 20 men could expect to be stricken during their one year tour.

The drug has been approved by the armed forces epidemiological board and the Food and Drug Administration, the spokesman said. Use of the drug by all U.S. troops in danger areas is expected soon. Stockpiles of DDS already are on hand in Viet Nam.

The drug is aimed specifically at falciparum, which drugs now in use are virtually helpless to prevent. Falciparum, a severe form of malaria, is restricted to the Vietnamese highlands.

A top figure in the research section of the surgeon general's office said even though the number of cases should be halved with the use of DDS, the figure still was too high "and we certainly haven't whipped this thing yet."

Walter Reed Hospital's Army Institute of Research headed the extensive test project that ended two weeks ago. The Army considers the malaria problem urgent enough that necessary final approval from the Food and Drug Administration was arranged in a telephone call.

Present plans are to give GIs in the highlands one 25 milligram pill each day at a cost of about a penny a dose. GIs would continue to use the pills for one month after leaving Viet Nam.

Malaria is transmitted by the Anopholes mosquito. DDS attacks the organism once it gets into the human system, preventing it from maturing and reproducing, thus helping to prevent the illness.

Queen Elizabeth's Visit May Stir up Religious Strife

By GODFREY ANDERSON

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) —Religious strife may pose security problems when Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip visit Northern Ireland next month.

Belfast remains a sectarian city in an ecumenical age. It takes religion seriously and its religious and political tensions are closely interwoven.

Protestant extremists have threatened the queen's hosts—Lord Erskine, governor of Northern Ireland, and his wife. They are angry that the governor vetoed their plan to name a new bridge, which the queen will open, for the late Lord Carson, Ulster's patriot Protestant hero. The bridge, the governor ruled firmly, will be called the Queen Elizabeth Bridge.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, leader of a militant sect called Free Presbyterians, says he will lead a march on the governor's residence July 2—two days before the queen arrives in Ireland. Paisley protests he is loyal to the queen but says he fears a takeover by the Roman Catholic Church in Northern Ireland. When the Archbishop of Canterbury went to Rome this spring for his historic meeting with Pope Paul VI, Paisley led a small but noisy opposition.

In Northern Ireland, about two-thirds of the population is Protestant, mainly Presbyterian or Church of Ireland-Anglican; and one-third Roman Catholic, The Republic, to its south, is 95 per cent Catholic. Northern Ireland probably is the only place left in the British Isles where being a Catholic or a Protestant can affect a person's whole life—where he lives, the kind of money he earns, the firm which is willing to employ him and the kind of job he can do.

Some Protestant firms will not employ Catholics at all. Others will give them only menial jobs. The Protestant Orangemen's lodges, set up to fight Roman Catholic influence, are still strong both in Parliament and Belfast City Hall. The slightest move may stir them to indignation and they can turn out thousands on the streets.

One difficulty is that religion is so closely bound with politics and business. The Unionist, conservative, party, which has long run the local government and sent 12 members to the London House of Commons, is an almost exclusively Protestant machine. Only in the last general election did one Belfast Roman Catholic gain a seat at Westminster.

Aging Actor Plays Mean Tennis Game

MOORESTOWN, N.J. AP -- Actor Edward Everett Horton, 81, plays a mean game of tennis, by special octogenarian rules. The ball has to come to him, and he always wins.

Horton, a stage veteran of 56 years, now appearing in a nearby straw hat theater, visits the Haddon Wood Indoor Tennis Center, every day for a game with the club pro, Jim McCaffrey.

And so far, the robust, athletic McCaffrey has yet to win.

"You understand the rules of this game. You always return the ball to me and I will always be standing in the center of the court, unless I'm sitting down somewhere."

Later, he expanded on his game.

"Tilden, Budge, Dramer. They've all played this game. They found it inadvisable to hit to my backhand. I don't hit backhands."

McCaffrey tried Horton's backhand, serving to the actor's left. Horton waved his racket as the ball sailed past.

Another rule prohibits volleying, but apparently the most important one, says Horton, is "I always win."

"The first morning I lost 6-1," said McCaffrey, "The second morning I lost 6-0."

Reduced Drills Slated for First Line Reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the units in a 150,000-man first line Army Reserve force will reduce their training, starting in July, after undergoing about eight months of intensified drills to get them ready for possible emergency deployment.

The Army announced today that units in this National Guard-Reserve force will be able to cut back from 72 drills a year to 58, provided they can pass combat readiness and other operational tests in summer active duty training.

These units, which had trained at a rate of 48 drills a year until last November, were boosted to 72 drills under Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's drive to get them in condition for possible deployment.

The goal for that readiness program was June 30 and Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the National Guard Bureau, claimed recently that the "mobilization readiness" objective already has been reached.

The objective called for this "selected Reserve force" to reach a point where it could move to a mobilization station and to start advanced unit training unit training with only seven days alert notice, then to take eight weeks of brigade and division training.

The result would be a National Guard-Reserve force ready to move to a combat theater within nine weeks of a mobilization order.

Afflicted Child to Be Poster Girl for Measles Campaign

FORT WAYNE, Ind. AP -- Pretty Kim Fisher, handicapped by one of childhood's most common diseases - measles, will tour the nation in a campaign to prevent other children from suffering as she has.

Kim, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Fisher of Fort Wayne, was named poster girl Wednesday for a 50-state measles prevention campaign by the National Association for Retarded Children.

A perfectly normal 1-year-old, walking and speaking sentences, Kim was stricken at 2 with the so-called "hard measles," resulting in encephalitis, or brain inflammation. A second attack at 4 left the child deaf, unable to speak, unable to stand or even hold up her head.

Although Kim has shown marked improvement through speech therapy, physiotherapy and a high-powered hearing aid, a completely normal life is forever out of reach.

New Hole Opens In K.C. Driveway

KANSAS CITY, Kan. AP -- Another hole opened up Wednesday night in the Argentine residential district undermined by an abandoned quarry.

The latest cave-on, 10 to 12 feet in diameter, cracked open a driveway at the Ralph Crookman home at 4018 Gibbs Road. The Monty Flack home, just east at 4012 Bibbs Road, fell into the quarry last week.

The City Commission Wednesday authorized drillings to determine the exact extent of the quarry's underground boundaries before taking corrective measures.

Carpenter's New Job Confirmed

SAIGON AP -- The U. S. Command confirmed today that Capt. William S. Carpenter Jr., a paratroop hero of the Kontum Plateau battle, will become an aide to Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander on U.S. forces in Viet Nam. It means switching from field duty to a staff job.

Carpenter, 28, distinguished himself June 9 by calling in a napalm air strike and artillery fire on the position of his company of the U. S. 101st Airborne Division to prevent it from being annihilated by infiltrating North Vietnamese regulars.

A U. S. spokesman said Carpenter will become Westmoreland's aide in the near future.

Why the Paper Is Late . . .

Rain . . . sleet . . . snow . . . 10 below zero! These are natural causes that at times slow down our delivery. But there are man-made causes, too.

You've Heard of Deadlines

A deadline is the last minute that anything can be accepted for the current issue . . . not, as many believe, the time to turn in news and advertising. So, if you and others are late in giving us news material, or an advertisement, then the paper may easily be late—there is much to do after the last news stories and advertisements are written.

Sometimes Mechanical Failure, Too

Yes, occasionally a machine may break down, or the press may get balky. These also can make the paper late. But when you think about it for a few moments, aren't you surprised at how often the paper isn't late? Despite late news and ads, equipment trouble, and peak loads of work, The Standard..... is usually on time. That's the way it should be!

Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Jr.

Jana Lane Atteberry Is June Bride of Charles Southern

CHARLESTON -- In a candlelighted ceremony Saturday at the First Baptist church at 7:30 p.m., Miss Jana Lane Atteberry became the bride of Charles Baxter Southern, Jr., of Caruthersville. Miss Attebery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Atteberry, route three, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Sr., of Caruthersville.

The choir loft was centered with a 17 branched candelabra and flanked by a pair of silver urns filled with hybride delphinium and white stock. The choir rail was banked with eucalyptus and flanked by two nine branched candelabra entwined with ecualyptus.

Mrs. R. A. Bess, aunt of the bride, was the organist and she accompanied Carter Fenton as he sang "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk organza with re-embroidered Alencon lace and seed pearls and sequins. The dress featured a scooped neckline with long sleeves and a crescent waistline. Attached to the back of the floor-length gown was a full-length chapel train. Her headpiece was a bouffant veil attached to a small crown of seed pearls. She carried a cascade of cattleya orchids and lily of the valley.

Mrs. W. J. Hunter of Memphis served as matron of honor. Mrs. J. H. Southern of Caruthersville, the groom's sister-in-law; Mrs. Betty Crader of Jackson and Mrs. Thomas Newman of St. Louis were bridesmaids.

They wore full-length gowns of mint green crepe with Empire waistlines with floating watteau panels in the back. On their heads, they wore mint green crepe flat bows with maline veiling and they carried crescent arrangements of white stephanotis and ivy.

The groom's father, Baxter Southern, served as best man. Groomsmen were J. H. Southern of Caruthersville, the groom's brother; R. C. Seeman of New Madrid, the groom's brother-in-law and James Boyd Atteberry, the bride's brother. Ushers were Richard Black of Jefferson City and Jim Herhold of St. Louis.

Mrs. Atteberry, the bride's mother, wore a pink ribbon lace dress with a pink veil hat and shoes and a pink cattleya orchid. The groom's mother wore a pink silk crepe with matching accessories and a pink orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the country home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was centered with a nine branch silver canelabra with the large wedding cake at one end and the silver punch bowl at the other end. Rice bags were given by the bride's cousins, Misses Jane and Carolyn Clemensen of St. Louis.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Robert Seeman of New Madrid, the groom's sister, and the bride's cousins, Mrs. Larry Brazel, Miss Taffi Brown and Miss Cathy Creed of Memphis, Tenn.

After the reception, the couple left for a trip to the Ozark mountains. For her going away costume the bride wore a brown and white cotton dress with white jacket and a white pique hat trimmed with brown velvet and matching accessories.

After their return, they will be at home in Caruthersville for the summer, but will move to New Orleans in the fall where the groom is a student in the Law School, Tulane University, New Orleans.

The bride is a graduate of Charleston high school and Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

During the past year she was a teacher at the Alma Schrader school in Cape Girardeau. In the fall she will begin teaching third grade at Laurel-McDonough school in New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Sr., entertained at 6:30 p.m. Friday with a dinner dance at the Holiday Inn in Sikeston for their son, Charles Baxter Southern, Jr., and his fiancee, Miss Atteberry and the members of their wedding party. The dinner was served buffet style to the 60 guests attending.

Garden Club Tours Park

The Meadow Lane Garden Club made tour of the State "Holly Conservation" Park near Dexter for their regular monthly meeting in June. The following members made the tour: Mrs. M. H. Davis, Mrs. Ruth Lee, Miss Effie Campbell, Mrs. J. E. Robinson, Mrs. Guy Calvin, Mrs. John H. Calvin and Mrs. Lenzie Beck.

At the park the group was met by Tom May, Stoddard County conservation agent, who served as official guide. May discussed the plans being made by the State Federation of Garden Clubs for the making of trails and other conveniences that the public may become more familiar with this native flora being conserved. May is, also, a collector of Indian relics and gave, as he displayed his collection, a very interesting presentation of this.

Of particular interest were the Spear Points used by the Palio culture of Indians 25,000 years ago. He displayed a rock and explained its being used for war paint, a familiar custom of Indians. He told of the use of many items in his collection such as relics used for saws, knives, Tomahawks and slate used for jewelry. May's collection consisted of some 4,000 pieces, all of which have been found in Stoddard county in the past three years.

TRAVELERS

Chicago broke down. The Travelers rolled into the big city three hours too late to make their train for LaSalle.

In desperation they tried to reserve seats on another train or bus, but none were scheduled for LaSalle. No cab would consent to take them the extra ninety miles either.

There seemed to be no answer to the predicament, and the trip and the audition became only a daydream since they would not be able to meet the New York bus. Then Mrs. Lois Parsley relieved the regular stationmaster and gained permission for an express train to make an unscheduled stop to pick up the Travelers.

To the relief of the Travelers, the other acts had waited for them in LaSalle. Thanks to the Rock Island Line they had made it.

After arriving in New York, the Travelers had a difficult choice to make. Only one song could be used for the important television audition. Naturally, they chose the Rock Island medley and again the train came through to win the audition for them.

Out of the five hundred auditioning acts in New York, only ten were selected to appear on the amateur hour. After the selection a show was taped and will be seen on Channel 12 at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The Travelers have been singing together for about two years. Originally, Russ Felker, Malcolm Lee, and Terry Burke began practicing and making a few appearances. Patty McMillin soon joined the group as the songstress, and later Sue Foster was added. They composed the Travelers for 1964-65.

Then the following fall Russ and Malcolm left for college, and Mike Hopkins and Steve Matthews filled in the gaps. Patty was also unable to continue so the group became a foursome.

When Russ and Terry first began playing around with the idea of a folk singing group, one of their favorite albums was the Travelers Three, so they took the Travelers as a name.

When Sue and Patty joined, the new quintet adopted the name since they sang many of the same songs.

Before the New York trip, the Travelers practiced every night, and now they practice at least twice a week. "We really do not have a leader, but Terry is the oldest member and usually takes the lead if someone needs to," said Sue.

To remain amateurs, they are not allowed to have a contract of any kind. However, the singers do play at clubs, private parties, organizations, schools, contests, and other functions.

At first they were slightly overshadowed by an older Sikeston folk-singing group, the Folklores. However, as time passed, they became better known in Sikeston and around the area.

Before appearing on the show, the Travelers had to sign a contract not to solicit votes in any way; they may merely invite people to vote for them. The voting is designed on the order of the United States electoral college. A certain number of votes is assigned to each state, and the act which receives the most votes from a state receives all of the electoral votes for that state.

The audition and the taping were the highlights of the trip to New York, but along the way the Travelers also squeezed in time to visit the Empire State building, Greenwich Village, the United Nations, Radio City Music Hall, and Broadway where they saw Hello, Dolly.

On the return trip they made a stopover to Washington, D.C. to visit Washington's monument, the Lincoln memorial, Arlington Cemetery, the Smithsonian Institute, and the United States Capitol.

When college splits the group again this fall, some of them hope to continue to sing together. Russ, Terry, and Malcolm have already formed the Brandywine Three and want to appear at resorts and dinner clubs in the future.

Although for the immediate future plans are rather indefinite, as Sue said, "Even if the Travelers do not continue to sing together next year, we have had some valuable experiences working and singing together in the past which none of us will forget.

COTTON

figures improved farming? The incomes was raised from $2960 in 1960, to $4,200 in 1965, and we expect to raise it to $4600 in 1966, with a per capita income of $1600. The gap in farm income with other workers is closing rapidly. The long battle on cotton is bringing dividends, and you may rest assured it is not being felt in Congress by your farm leaders. They will battle to keep the 16 million acreage allotment and the good leadership you now have in your agricultural states, will help win the battle."

Haskell Holman, state auditor, gave count of state affairs in the afternoon session. "As your bookkeeper, I which to say your state is on a sound cash basis. Your executive branch of your governor, lieutenant governor, secretary, attorney general and myself, together with your legislative body, are your safeguards. We cannot expend when the cash is not there. Every expense item of $2000 or more must have a sealed bid. Your state has only one form of income, and that is income from the pockets of the taxpyers. If you want additional services, you must be willing to pay for it."

The closing speaker at the afternoon session was Rep. Paul Jones. "The bill on domestic payments now enacted a week ago will help the cotton growers, but some persons have the mistaken idea that if their cotton was plowed up they would receive a 9 cent payment and then plant to soybeans. The bill provides only when the cotton would not be planted. Those who plowed up their cotton were not complying with the intent of the law", he said.

"The law was made to apply to other crops as well. The Public Law 480 tightens the bill on foreign surplus and the foreign governments must prove their intent and reduce other commodities. A bill now in the House calls for community development, especially in rural areas, to help industry come in. I have supported the amendments where communities will take equal cooperation in their participation."

The banquet session was held at the high school gymnasium.

The principal speaker, Sen. George McGovern, was introduced by Sen. Symington.

"You have a fighting group of farm legislators from Missouri, and I am glad to assist them. Your midwest legislators are bringing their needs across to Congress, and success will be yours. Congress knows the well-being of agriculture to sound economy, and now speak out in great force, and the effectiveness on the American farmer.

"The American agriculture can be prosperous in the years ahead, if we have sound farm programs and a foreign policy which makes the proper use of our production to win the peace. The cotton producers have recognized the importance of world trade. Our surpluses for export depressed domestic farm prices.

"The realization of the effect of foreign markets and the need for our products has changed many attitudes. There is a growing need for a Food for Freedom program, with payments to bring returns up to an acceptable level and competitive in the world market.

"The challenging crisis for the rest of this century is the race between human consumption and population. This calls for expansion of food and fiber. Hunger is a serious problem in the world. It is more killing and maiming than gunfire, and a greater threat to future mankind than the nuclear bomb.

"Just last year I intoduced a bill in Congress to increase food and fiber assistance a half billion dollars a year for the next seven years. With all our food producing know how we could not reach the demand at our present rate by the year 2000. Neither our national security nor our moral and political situation in the world will permit us to turn our backs on the Number one problem of the last third of the 20th century."

"We have already seen a 10 per cent increase in rice acreage; a 15 per cent increase in wheat acreage, and a much better outlook on the sale of the cotton surpluses, which will accelerate at a rapid pace.

"A foreign policy based on the conduct of the one war we can win --the war against want -- will build not only the foundation of world peace, but also the foundation for a permanently secure agriculture in our own land."

ELECT A FULL TIME MAN

VETERAN

Harold Hahn

QUALIFIED

ELECT A YOUNG QUALIFIED MAN

To The Voters of Scott County

Some two months ago, I published an article giving you my qualifications for the office of County Collector. Also in this article, I challenged my opponents to do the same. I did this so you people could make a comparison of our qualifications and hire the best qualified man for the job. To date NONE of my opponents have published their qualifications. I wonder why? Could it be that when they really thought of what they were going to tell you that it was so little that it scared them. However all of them say they are Qualified. If they are, why don't they publish it so all of you can know what their Qualifications are. Could it be that my opponents are trying to deceive you into thinking they are Qualified just because they say they are. If they are trying to deceive you before they are elected what will they do if they are elected? There is a rumor going around that I was HIRED to run for this office. This is a FLAT LIE! I am running for this office on MY OWN and I am spending MY OWN MONEY. This way, if I am elected I will be obligated only to you, the people of this County. I am running because of the way our tax office is being handled. I think it is high time to get this office straightened out. If I am elected, I will do just that. I am fighting the Clique in this election and I ask you to help me to BEAT IT. If It is not good for our County or for you to have one man controlling our County Offices. I ask you to vote for me for County Collector and we will have a start on BUSTING the CLIQUE in Scott County.

Respectfully Submitted

Coleman Urges All Citizens To Give

E. P. Coleman, Jr., who is the chairman of the Board of Director's for the Missouri Delta Community hospital, and who has contributed ONE MILLION DOLLARS for improvements, said today that the building fund program should receive the enthusiastic support of ALL citizens in the area. A drive is now underway to raise $842,500 locally for a new wing that is to cost $2,933,000.

Harold Jones, hospital administrator, said "An organization is no stronger than its leadership. The excellence of directorship of the hospital is apparent. Five of the present 24 members of the board of directors are charter members.

The first patient was admitted to the hospital Dec. 1, 1948. The growth pattern of the hospital has been "fantastic." Patient day increases have averaged 10 per cent while laboratory examinations increased 30 per cent each year. During 11 months of 1964 a specific chart of in-patient activity was maintained. Of those 330 days charted, patients were admitted to the hallways 115 days, due to lack of adequate facilities.

New facilities will make available 54 additional beds, making a total of 200 beds in the hospital.

The proposed new addition, when completed, will create a need for additional employes.

The tooth was taken to State College, Cape Girardeau, where it was judged to have belonged to a mastodon.

The mastodon -- according to the World Book encyclopedia-- was an elephant-like creature with a coat of long hair. It was said to have roamed the plains of Egypt some 35 million years ago. It later migrated to Africa and then to America about thirteen million years ago.

Cotton Producers Attend Meeting

A BATHING SUIT made from cotton, and a second place winner with a $25 prize, won by Miss Carol Gaines, New Madrid county. The winners modeled for the Missouri Cotton Producers Association at Poplar Bluff last night.

POPLAR BLUFF -- More than 300 cotton producers heard national legislators and fiber leaders speak here Friday at the Missouri Cotton Producers Association meeting.

The meeting opened at the Holiday Inn here for a noon luncheon with a short business session of the board of directors and township leaders. George Shelby Jr., Charleston, presided. The call to order and business session was led by James N. Conner, Kennett, executive vice president.

The 17th annual program found an array of national, state and local leaders, including senators Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long of Missouri and George McGovern of South Dakota; Dr. M. K. Horne, National Cotton Council, Memphis; Wilson Tucker, commodity stabilization service, Washington, D. C.; Rep. Paul C. Jones, Kennett.

Fifteen Sew-With-Cotton award winners from New Madrid county, under the leadership of Miss Rebecca Nistendirk, displayed the garments they made.

Two top awards were presented at the banquet by Sen. Long, the first to George Shelby Jr., as the outstanding leader in the Missouri Cotton Producers Association, and to Rep. Paul Jones for his leadership on agriculture in Congress.

Elected to lead the seven-county Cotton Producers Association for the coming year was W. J. Clarkston, Poplar Bluff. Others officers chosen were first vice-president, H. B. Boyd, Campbell; second vice president, Claude Keasler, Parma; third vice president, John Bailey, Portageville; fourth vice president, Jack Tipton, Caruthersville; fifth vice president, Robert S. Matthews, Sikeston; treasurer, Wayne DeLisle, Portageville, and James Conner, re-elected executive vice president.

At the afternoon session Dr. James M. K. Horne Jr., Memphis, Tenn., chief economist, National Cotton Council, showed slides on the high texture of cotton fiber compared with other substitute fibers.

Tucker said, "You can rest assured that your national representatives are ever mindful of the cotton situation, and never a day passes, but what your leaders are showing a decided headway. Our carry-over will be reduced within a few years, averaging over one million bales a year, and increased from this point.

"The value of your crop was $55 million in 1965 and $7 million from seed income, down from the previous year, but for 1966 99 per cent of the cotton growers signed for the program, with 78,000 acres. The bill signed by the president on June 17, will alleviate the cotton planting damage considerably, and a small measure to help the grower. It must be remembered, however, that the consumption is up four per cent, but the exports are down 1 per cent. It is here that I expect to see a great difference, as in the next three years we can expect to export from 17 to 19 million bales, and next year we expect to export almost 6 million bales.

"On other programs in agriculture, 62,000 farmers took part in the A C P program for an income of $9 million; 9,000 farmers received emergency assistance; 8456 cotton farmers, earned over $2 million; 55,000 farmers wheat farmers converted two million acres in 1965, and reduced the production 100 million bushels at a value of $189 million.

"You may ask how these

Coleman Urges All Citizens To Give

E. P. Coleman, Jr., who is the chairman of the Board of Director's for the Missouri Delta Community hospital, and who has contributed ONE MILLION DOLLARS for improvements, said today that the building fund program should receive the enthusiastic support of ALL citizens in the area. A drive is now underway to raise $842,500 locally for a new wing that is to cost $2,933,000.

Harold Jones, hospital administrator, said "An organization is no stronger than its leadership. The excellence of directorship of the hospital is apparent. Five of the present 24 members of the board of directors are charter members.

The first patient was admitted to the hospital Dec. 1, 1948. The growth pattern of the hospital has been "fantastic." Patient day increases have averaged 10 per cent while laboratory examinations increased 30 per cent each year. During 11 months of 1964 a specific chart of in-patient activity was maintained. Of those 330 days charted, patients were admitted to the hallways 115 days, due to lack of adequate facilities.

New facilities will make available 54 additional beds, making a total of 200 beds in the hospital.

The proposed new addition, when completed, will create a need for additional employes.

The Urbmobile for city travel and the Century Cruiser for inter-city travel are the two drawing board dream cars suggested by Cornell.

A motorist would drive his Urbmobile to the nearest expressway or street where it would come under automatic control all the way to the city parking lot near the motorist's office.

The Century Cruiser is a speedy beast. It would cruise at 100 m.p.h. with acceleration to spare for passing or maneuvering.

A Cruiser would be under full control of the driver. But, says the Cornell report, it would incorporate "all the latest advances in braking, refinement of steering and handling qualities, aerodynamic stability and new instrumentation . . ."

It seems certain that we'll wee many peculiar automobiles in the future.

For example: The Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin asked its female readers for car-building ideas. They suggested cars in Early-American decor; a built-in vacuum cleaner; and a power-driven vertical panel to cut off child noise in the back seat from parents in the front, and clear panels at the bottoms of front doors so drivers can see the curb when parking.

The wildest idea of all, however, may well be an infra-red device attached to a driver's glasses that enables him to push buttons by looking at them. Motorists may be able to steer, actuate turn signals, toot horns, dim lights and even speed up or slow down by looking at buttons on their auto dashboards.

The device has been developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

BLURRING THE ODER-NEISSE LINE

Every peace settlement, it is said, contains the seeds of a future war. Germany's seizure of Alsace-Lorraine in 1871 made another Franco-German conflict inevitable. Placing the entire blame for World War I on Germany helped to bring on World War II. And cession of Germany territory east of the Oder and Neisse rivers to Poland in 1945 has threatened the stability of Central Europe for two decades.

But now the Oder-Neisse issue may be losing some of its explosiveness. At least, the West German government has indicated that it is willing to discuss the question. In an interview printed in the Swiss weekly "Die Weltwoche," June 2, Chancellor Ludwig Erhard hinted that Bonn might renounce claim to the eastern territories as part of the price to be paid for reunification. West Germany is "ready to make sacrifices" to rejoin East Germany Erhard said.

Willy Brandt, mayor of West Berlin, recently told the Social Democratic party convention that he, too, had changed his mind about how to approach reunification. "Formerly I argued that first the division of Germany must be overcome before we can talk about the borders," Brandt said. "Now I feel differently." The first order of business, in his opinion, is to relax tension by disposing of the Oder-Neisse question.

Other West German leaders apparently would go much further. Rainer Barzel, majority leader in parliament and the current favorite to succeed Erhard as chancellor, has proposed that the Soviet Union be permitted to keep troops in a reunified Germany. Moreover, Barzel would confer legal status on the Communist Party if Germany were reunified.

Suggestions like these would have been unthinkable during the regime of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. Today, they are something less than shocking. The winds of change are sweeping across Europe.

SELLS MORE FOOD

A MERCHANDISING executive has declared that "you can sell more food through newspaper advertising than any other media."

"This is why we spend 90% of our advertising dollar in newspapers and 10% in television and radio," said Orville W. Johler, vice-president of Independent Grocers' Alliance (IGA), which he described as the world's largest voluntary food store chain.

"Advertising is newspapers," Johler said at a seminar for IGA advertising managers, "is always more exciting than other media because readers are keyed up, more alert often because of the latest happenings which they read about. This type of exhilaration also provokes people to action more than other media do."

"FABULOUS NEW ERA"

The current era has been characterized by industrial expansion on a vast scale. Record after record has been established -- and then record after record has been broken.

In this soaring economy, the gas industry has been one of the more spectacular leaders, and some new figures from the American Gas Association show it will continue to be. It is now the nation's sixth largest industry, serving 36 million customers, and last year the value of its plants climbed to $26 billion. This year alone gas utilities and pipeline companies throughout the nation expect to spend $1.8 billion on new construction. And the figure for the four years, 1964-67, period is forecast at a staggering $7.2 billion.

These expenditures, says an Association spokesman, are needed not only to better serve these 36 million customers, but to help meet the country's continually expanding energy requirements. And, he adds, they "give striking evidence of the forward strides being made by the gas industry in helping to underwrite the development of a fabulous new era for the consumer and nation."

The taxpaying private industries of this nation, of which gas is typical, have the ability and the desire to bring that era about. Let's all hope their path is not needlessly roughened by an excess of mistaken zeal on the part of government -- the kind of zeal that so often has led to harsh and destructive regulatory policies and to other economic depressants.

WHY NOT PATRONIZE U.S. SHIPS

Rear Admiral Ralph K. James, Ret., of the Committee of American Steamship Lines points out that United States production of very fast liner ships -- 19 knots or more-represents some 75 per cent of world production. And when his Committee's massive ship replacement program is completed in 1975, the American fleet in the liner trade will be the best on the seas.

That is a pleasant picture. But, Admiral James goes on, there are no guarantees that it will come about. And it can only come about if American shippers patronize to a far greater extent than now, our U.S.-flag vessels.

The situation is a serious one. Overall -- including tanker, bulk carrier and tramp shipments -- our merchant ships account for a mere 9 per cent of our carryings. In other maritime nations, by way of contrast, their own ships often carry about 50 per cent of their import-export cargoes. The situation is better in the liner trade-- there American flag shipping accounts for 29 per cent of the tonnage and about 37 per cent of the value. But we can, and must, do much better.

This is certainly not the fault of our shipping lines. They provide the best service on the fastest vessels. Their rates are competitive. They maintain highly-skilled organizations to serve the needs of shippers. Yet our merchant marine is grossly under-utilized at a time when more than $40 billion in foreign trade goods flow through our ports each year.

There is more to this than the commercial aspect. Russia is engaged in a huge maritime building program designed to give her domination of the trade routes of the world. This is a part -- an extremely important and menacing part -- of the cold war. But that challenge can be turned back, Admiral James tells us, "If more Americans can be encouraged to ship American..."

James Long, poll editor of the Oregon Journal asked residents of Portland and vicinity: Do you approve of the $7,500 a year pay raise congressmen voted for themselves?

The results, in percentages: Approve 22.7; disapprove 74.5; no opinion 2.8.

Said Mr. Long, "The thing that lifted the eyebrows of most of poll participants was not the raise itself, but the size of the raise and its proportion to the present salary for lawmakers. . . . .$22,500 a year to $30,000."

It was pointed out by persons questioned that there is no shortage of candidates for Congress and that there are a number of congressmen who do not deserve such a raise.

It was almost midnight and the attractive, well-stacked woman had been standing at the bus stop for over half an hour, obviously several martinis past her limit, when up drove a personable - appearing chap with an offer of transportation home. Sliding into the seat beside him, the inebriated miss managed to mumble her address, then slumped drowsily against the fellow's shoulder. Responding to the opportunity, the driver wrapped his free arm around his pretty passenger and pressed her closer to him, proceeding with as personal an appraisal of the terrain as possible without taking his eyes off the road, or his other hand off the wheel.

At first she seemed oblivious to what was going on, but then she came to life, exclaiming, "Man, you're passionate!"

Quite naturally flattered by this apparent reference to his romantic technique, he attempted to take further liberties and was promptly greeted with a stinging slap across the face. Stopping the car abruptly, he turned to her angrily and said: "Look, lady, on the one hand you tell me how passionate I am and with the other you smack me. Why don't you make up your mind?"

STRENGTH FOR EMERGENCY

A short time ago, Lederle Laboratories, one of the nation's leading manufacturers of drugs, was honored by national, state and local Civil Defense officials. In a special ceremony, high ranking military officers and Governor Rockefeller of New York hailed the firm for its "outstanding" emergency planning.

The reason for this unusual event was that Lederle has conducted a 10-year program of emergency planning designed to assure vital medical products for the nation in case of military attack or natural disaster. It has some 14 buildings which provide protection against blast, shock, heat, light, and flying objects, all located on the company's 550 acre tract in such a way as to be highly decentralized yet easily reached by personnel. The whole purpose has been the establishment of a system where its essential medical products, numbering 400, would continue to be available in the event of national emergency.

Curiously enough, in recent "peacetime" years, the U.S. government has been shaking the foundations of the admittedly vital drug industry by ignoring its earned patent rights to purchase drugs manufactured by companies which have done no research on them and can sell more cheaply.

There has been much misleading criticism of the drug companies, coming from those who conveniently overlook the industry's splendid achievements and purposes. An event such as the award to Lederle should help to clear the air and let the truth emerge.

Washington Merry- Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The President of the United States may be a doting daddy as far as his two daughters are concerned, but officially he's against any permanent recognition of father's day. Mothers, no. They are on their own.

Word of this came to light when Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Rep. Joe Resnick, D- N. Y., introduced resolutions putting the United States government on record in favor of fathers.

Sen. Randolph is a director of Big Brothers of the national capital area and wanted not only to honor fathers, but highlight the problem of caring for fatherless boys. This is the goal of Big Brothers, namely, the one man - one boy idea of a Big Brother as a companion for a fatherless boy.

Rep. Resnick was also interested in emphasizing this.

However, all acts of congress, ranging from resolutions to major appropriations bills, must go to the budget bureau for approval. Reason: To keep congressional spending down and make sure an act of congress conforms to the President's policies and budget. So when the father's day resolutions reached the budget bureau, its seriousminded officials took out their pencils and tried to figure how much father's day would cost the nation.

They figured hard. But for the life of them they couldn't figure how father's day would cost President Johnson, or the taxpayers, anything. There was no provision in the resolutions for spending anything, not even speeches made. The resolutions merely proposed that the nation pay tribute on a family-to-family basis to the male head of the family and consider the importance of befriending children who weren't fortunate enough to have fathers.

Even so, the budget bureau was suspicious. Maybe there was a hidden dollar some place behind the resolutions which they didn't see.

Finally, it decided to ok the father's day resolutions for one year only. This would give them time to see whether the expenditure of hidden dough was involved.

ONE SENATOR AGAINST FATHERS

When the resolutions reached the full senate, they had the sympathetic support of Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the Democratic leader, father of a comely Irish Colleen who occasionally, not often, listens to the advice of the senator.

But the resolutions aroused the opposition of Mansfield's assistant Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, who claimed that father's day was for the benefit of merchants.

"Why is it necessary to have a national father's day?" Sen. Long asked.

"The distinguished senator from Louisiana," remonstrated Sen. Randolph, "would not, I am sure, want to have invalidated the legislation which created mother's day. Would he want that act rescinded now by the congress?"

"I am not a mother," replied Sen. Long, "and I do not feel particularly qualified to speak on the subject."

Sen. Randolph rallied to the defense of both fathers and mothers, and after further discussion Sen. Long, with a weather eye on the Dodd hearings and charges of conflicts of interest, concluded: "Insomuch as I am a father and have something of an interest in this matter, I should like to ask to be excused from voting on it."

Other members of the senate, 95 per cent of them fathers, chose to ignore their conflict of interest and voted themselves and the rest of the fathers of the nation a resolution of tribute on father's day.

However, as far as the Johnson administration is concerned, it is on record in favor of fathers for 1966 only, not 1967. Because of the budget bureau, this weighty problem will have to be tackled again next year.

HAIRCUTS AND RESTROOMS

While the budget bureau cast a jaundiced eye at father's day, the House of Representatives cast a jaundiced eye at free haircuts, free bottled water for senators, and other picayunish problems. Members of the House do not get free haircuts or bottled water.

"Is there any money in this bill for free haircuts for spring water?" inquired Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, during debate on the $172 million housekeeping bill for congress.

"So far as I know," replied Rep. George Andrews, D-Ala., "there never has been any money appropriated for free haircuts on this side and neither have we made any money available for mountain water for house members."

GROSS -- "Now, is there any money in this bill for the manning of the automatic elevators in the Rayburn building?"

ANDREWS -- "There is a small amount in the bill, but it is not being used."

GROSS -- "These elevators operate as well, if not better, without being manned. It would be my hope that no one gets the idea that simply because there is money available they should go out and hire operators."

Gross also raised a fuss about the lack of an adequate restroom on the house side for women visitors to the capitol.

"If we can have a car wash on the main floor of the garage in the Rayburn building, I certainly think a women's public restroom should be established on one of the main floors of the house side of the capitol," he complained.

On this point both Democrats and Republicans agreed. Public restrooms for women on the main floor became a bipartisan policy.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

PERILOUS ROAD TO OUTSVILLE

An acquaintance stopped me on the street. "Congratulations," he said.

"About what?"

"The hat."

"What about the hat?"

"Well, so's yours."

"That's what I mean," he replied. "Congratulations to us both. We have the courage to be different."

Now, it is true that we were the only people in sight wearing broad-brimmed straws. Nine out of the ten male passers-by were bare headed and the rest had perched on the tops of their heads these high-crowned things with practically no brims that make you look like a dialect Swede in a burlesque show.

I didn't tell my friend that I sunburn easily and that the hat was my doctor's suggestion. Instead, I basked with him in our superiority over the fashion-cowed rabble. What other excuse is there for a summer hat except shade? We had the moral courage to lean against the winds of current asininity. We were from "Outsville," and proud of it.

BUT this poses a distressing question: How far out of Insville and into Outsville should a man go? Where do you draw the line between forthright defiance of a silly fashion of the moment and an idiotic transgression of normal decorum?

A tired woman slips her shoes off in a darkened movie. She doesn't do it in church, where everyone would notice. The opera diva opens her mouth wide on the big notes and we cry, "Bravo!" But the rest of us must conceal a yawn with our hands. The gentleman still walks to the curbside of his lady, although the splash of mire from the carriage wheels is no longer a problem. Custom. Tradition.

The man who follows a tradition, even an obsolete or foolish one, advertises himself as a player by the rules. The rules are not consistent. The pinch of snuff and the sneeze, which made an 18th Century dandy, would produce a bum today. The appreciative after-dinner belch, de rigeur in the southern Sudan, would horrify the western hostess. But the rule-abiders, in any culture and any age, are people who keep a check-rein on themselves. There's some virtue in it.

THE professional rebels of today are like the evangelical members of antisuperstition societies who run under ladders, break mirrors and cut behind black cats. The rebel tries to break all the rules. If the rule is cleanliness the rebel is dirty. If the rule is a struggle for neatness or beauty the rebel is a studied slob. If Society requires certain standards of decorum the rebel behaves like a goat. He's strictly from Outsville.

But his problem is that he's also in Insville. He is hoping to impress and gain acceptance among other rebels whose rule is no-rule. He is caught in a habit pattern more rigid than that which afflicts the "square." More rigid and more idiotic, for it is contrary to nature for a man or woman to strive for repulsiveness.

THE compulsive crowd-follower is only slightly superior. He checks his common sense and does whatever "they" are doing. "They" are the arbiters of fashion, the "cognoscenti", the "jet set." The skinny-legged lady in the thigh-length skirt, and the fat woman in the Bikini are inadvertent clowns.

Slavish attention to what "they" are wearing or doing or attending gives the unsure personality the comfort of the herd. "They" even represent acceptable habits of thought. Some of the slick magazines have been talking reverently about the "mainstream" of American opinion. If you are out of the "mainstream" you are odd. If you are to the right of it you are very odd, possibly dangerous.

There have been many "mainstreams" of human thought. Four hundred years ago the divine appointment of kings was taken for granted. Three hundred years ago witches were for burning. Two hundred years ago preachers found holy sanction for human slavery. It will be interesting to see how history treats some of the economic and social dogmas in the current "mainstream.'

BUT because the past was often wrong it doesn't follow that all old values and venerable philosophies may be safely junked. True, the Wright brothers did what our ancestors thought impossible, but a lot of Darius Greens flapped their wings futilely as they fell from barn lofts. The trick lies not in junking, but in refinement. There's more to philosophy than beard-growing, and Plato can still think rings around the beatnik.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Victor Reuther Leads ADA Group to Moscow.

Washington, D. C.: -- No one will deny that Victor George Reuther, the younger brother, has courage. He has fought the toughest. And now he is going to Moscow via Warsaw.

There will be searing criticism -- from in and out the labor movement.

Reuther's swift intellectualism makes it certain he is aware that the cascading news coverage will make him one of the world's most famed travelers and will recall an earlier bicycling trip through the Soviet with brother Walter.

During some of Victor's rounds abroad, Walter will be in Brussels, but he will not journey to the East.

The junior (54 - year - old) Reuther will leave here on July 6 as one of the leaders of a band of 37 voyagers gathered by the capital branch of the Americans For Democratic Action.

They have no mission to Moscow.

But Victor Reuther has a mission of his own which will make this a long hot summer for himself, his brother and the high command of American labor.

First, insiders see Victor's trip, coming so soon after the earthy battle between George Meany and Walter Reuther over foreign policy, as a long, high flare signaling the launching of the auto union's offensive against the AFL-CIO's inflexible, anti - Soviet, anti-Peking foreign policy.

The not very subtle hint of all this can be seen in the statement issued on June 16th by Walter Reuther in which he said:

"The leadership and the membership of the UAW, like many other Americans, are deeply disturbed about the growing negative character of AFL-CIO policy in the field of international affairs, of which the withdrawal of AFL-CIO delegates from the current International Labor Organization (ILO) conference is but the latest expression."

This is tough. This is blunt. This is open warfare.

The auto union constitutional convention, it should be noted, called for the recognition of Peking China and its admission to the United Nations.

Furthermore, the Reuthers want not only to "build bridges" to the Soviet bloc, but to construct clover leaves off the highways of history to the labor organizations of the USSR and Eastern Europe. Meany believes there are no such things as unions behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains. He sees them as instruments of the state designed to discipline workers and set high - speed production norms. He's convinced they are under rigid control of the Communist Parties' central committee.

But Victor Reuther, head of the auto union's powerful and well - financed International Affairs Dept., could not care less what Meany thinks. Victor Reuther, as does his brother, wants to exchange labor delegations -- immediately if not sooner. He believes in this international cooperation. For months now the brothers Reuther have been trying to bring over a group of Soviet labor officials. The UAW had a Washington and Detroit itinerary all prepared. There were to be informal briefings and fraternal gatherings. The invitations had gone through the Citizen Exchange Corps, formerly Hostages For Peace.

But at the proverbial last minute, the U. S. State Dept. refused to grant the necessary visas. The AFL-CIO leadership had opposed them.

The official State Dept. rejection of the visa requests paralleled the AFL-CIO's objection: The Russians were no tourists. They were actually a labor delegation. Granting the entry permits would equate Soviet and U. S. unions and give the mission from Moscow unjustified status in global labor circles just at a time when the Communist bloc was pushing for a popular front of all labor.

Meany also had killed off a proposal by John A. Gronouski, U. S. ambassador to Poland, to send some Polish speaking unionists from his home state of Wisconsin to Poland.

Now Victor Reuther will see his old friend Gronouski in Warsaw. It is believed they will again plan to set up a labor exchange in the image of the cultural exchanges.

There is no doubt that Reuther will confer with the leaders of the USSR's All - Union Central Council of Trade Unions. There is no doubt in circles here that he will suggest exchanges between the auto union and the group of labor organizations which support the Reuther position.

There is no doubt that this will be the issue later this summer when the AFL-CIO's high command meets for a three-day discussion of American labor's foreign policy. Meany and the overwhelming bloc of U. S. labor chieftians will not retreat in their distaste for what they call totalitarian labor fronts set up by the Communist nations.

The Reuthers will then tell the Meany majority to jump into the Potomac -- that is, if it's a polite session -- and then proceed on their own with the bridge building.

The big question is, however, "Who will control the pontoon to the White House?"

The Urbmobile for city travel and the Century Cruiser for inter-city travel are the two drawing board dream cars suggested by Cornell.

A motorist would drive his Urbmobile to the nearest expressway or street where it would come under automatic control all the way to the city parking lot near the motorist's office.

The Century Cruiser is a speedy beast. It would cruise at 100 m.p.h. with acceleration to spare for passing or maneuvering.

A Cruiser would be under full control of the driver. But, says the Cornell report, it would incorporate "all the latest advances in braking, refinement of steering and handling qualities, aerodynamic stability and new instrumentation . . ."

It seems certain that we'll wee many peculiar automobiles in the future.

For example: The Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin asked its female readers for car-building ideas. They suggested cars in Early-American decor; a built-in vacuum cleaner; and a power-driven vertical panel to cut off child noise in the back seat from parents in the front, and clear panels at the bottoms of front doors so drivers can see the curb when parking.

The wildest idea of all, however, may well be an infra-red device attached to a driver's glasses that enables him to push buttons by looking at them. Motorists may be able to steer, actuate turn signals, toot horns, dim lights and even speed up or slow down by looking at buttons on their auto dashboards.

The device has been developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

BLURRING THE ODER-NEISSE LINE

Every peace settlement, it is said, contains the seeds of a future war. Germany's seizure of Alsace-Lorraine in 1871 made another Franco-German conflict inevitable. Placing the entire blame for World War I on Germany helped to bring on World War II. And cession of Germany territory east of the Oder and Neisse rivers to Poland in 1945 has threatened the stability of Central Europe for two decades.

But now the Oder-Neisse issue may be losing some of its explosiveness. At least, the West German government has indicated that it is willing to discuss the question. In an interview printed in the Swiss weekly "Die Weltwoche," June 2, Chancellor Ludwig Erhard hinted that Bonn might renounce claim to the eastern territories as part of the price to be paid for reunification. West Germany is "ready to make sacrifices" to rejoin East Germany Erhard said.

Willy Brandt, mayor of West Berlin, recently told the Social Democratic party convention that he, too, had changed his mind about how to approach reunification. "Formerly I argued that first the division of Germany must be overcome before we can talk about the borders," Brandt said. "Now I feel differently." The first order of business, in his opinion, is to relax tension by disposing of the Oder-Neisse question.

Other West German leaders apparently would go much further. Rainer Barzel, majority leader in parliament and the current favorite to succeed Erhard as chancellor, has proposed that the Soviet Union be permitted to keep troops in a reunified Germany. Moreover, Barzel would confer legal status on the Communist Party if Germany were reunified.

Suggestions like these would have been unthinkable during the regime of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. Today, they are something less than shocking. The winds of change are sweeping across Europe.

A MERCHANDISING executive has declared that "you can sell more food through newspaper advertising than any other media."

"This is why we spend 90% of our advertising dollar in newspapers and 10% in television and radio," said Orville W. Johler, vice-president of Independent Grocers' Alliance (IGA), which he described as the world's largest voluntary food store chain.

"Advertising is newspapers," Johler said at a seminar for IGA advertising managers, "is always more exciting than other media because readers are keyed up, more alert often because of the latest happenings which they read about. This type of exhilaration also provokes people to action more than other media do."

"FABULOUS NEW ERA"

The current era has been characterized by industrial expansion on a vast scale. Record after record has been established -- and then record after record has been broken.

In this soaring economy, the gas industry has been one of the more spectacular leaders, and some new figures from the American Gas Association show it will continue to be. It is now the nation's sixth largest industry, serving 36 million customers, and last year the value of its plants climbed to $26 billion. This year alone gas utilities and pipeline companies throughout the nation expect to spend $1.8 billion on new construction. And the figure for the four years, 1964-67, period is forecast at a staggering $7.2 billion.

These expenditures, says an Association spokesman, are needed not only to better serve these 36 million customers, but to help meet the country's continually expanding energy requirements. And, he adds, they "give striking evidence of the forward strides being made by the gas industry in helping to underwrite the development of a fabulous new era for the consumer and nation."

The taxpaying private industries of this nation, of which gas is typical, have the ability and the desire to bring that era about. Let's all hope their path is not needlessly roughened by an excess of mistaken zeal on the part of government -- the kind of zeal that so often has led to harsh and destructive regulatory policies and to other economic depressants.

WRONG INCENTIVE

James Long, poll editor of the Oregon Journal asked residents of Portland and vicinity: Do you approve of the $7,500 a year pay raise congressmen voted for themselves?

The results, in percentages: Approve 22.7; disapprove 74.5; no opinion 2.8.

Said Mr. Long, "The thing that lifted the eyebrows of most of poll participants was not the raise itself, but the size of the raise and its proportion to the present salary for lawmakers. . . . $22,500 a year to $30,000."

It was pointed out by persons questioned that there is no shortage of candidates for Congress and that there are a number of congressmen who do not deserve such a raise.

If income is to be the incentive for seeking high political office, the future of our republic is on a shaky foundation.

It was almost midnight and the attractive, well-stacked woman had been standing at the bus stop for over half an hour, obviously several martinis past her limit, when up drove a personable - appearing chap with an offer of transportation home. Sliding into the seat beside him, the inebriated miss managed to mumble her address, then slumped drowsily against the fellow's shoulder. Responding to the opportunity, the driver wrapped his free arm around his pretty passenger and pressed her closer to him, proceeding with as personal an appraisal of the terrain as possible without taking his eyes off the road, or his other hand off the wheel.

At first she seemed oblivious to what was going on, but then she came to life, exclaiming, "Man, you're passionate!"

Quite naturally flattered by this apparent reference to his romantic technique, he attempted to take further liberties and was promptly greeted with a stinging slap across the face. Stopping the car abruptly, he turned to her angrily and said: "Look, lady, on the one hand you tell me how passionate I am and with the other you smack me. Why don't you make up your mind?"

"I don't know what you're talkin' about, mishter," came the slurred reply, "but all I was referring to was my house -- I said you're pashin' it!"

I do not want to be picked up!"

"Senora, I am not picking you up, I am picking you out!"

"Two sculptors from New York," came the answer.

STRENGTH FOR EMERGENCY

A short time ago, Lederle Laboratories, one of the nation's leading manufacturers of drugs, was honored by national, state and local Civil Defense officials. In a special ceremony, high ranking military officers and Governor Rockefeller of New York hailed the firm for its "outstanding" emergency planning.

The reason for this unusual event was that Lederle has conducted a 10-year program of emergency planning designed to assure vital medical products for the nation in case of military attack or natural disaster. It has some 14 buildings which provide protection against blast, shock, heat, light, and flying objects, all located on the company's 550 acre tract in such a way as to be highly decentralized yet easily reached by personnel. The whole purpose has been the establishment of a system where its essential medical products, numbering 400, would continue to be available in the event of national emergency.

Curiously enough, in recent "peacetime" years, the U.S. government has been shaking the foundations of the admittedly vital drug industry by ignoring its earned patent rights to purchase drugs manufactured by companies which have done no research on them and can sell more cheaply.

There has been much misleading criticism of the drug companies, coming from those who conveniently overlook the industry's splendid achievements and purposes. An event such as the award to Lederle should help to clear the air and let the truth emerge.

Doc. Duncan Says

Most folks that think, think the reason politicians muscled in and took over the schools is they want to brainwash the kids beginning at four years old, to make sure they will accept the one world government and the anti-Christ as God. You see this cross-breed Americans are hard to brainwash. You think the job is well done, then look around and for some reason they have come unglued.

Washington Merry- Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- The President of the United States may be a doting daddy as far as his two daughters are concerned, but officially he's against any permanent recognition of father's day. Mothers, no. They are on their own.

Word of this came to light when Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Rep. Joe Resnick, D- N. Y., introduced resolutions putting the United States government on record in favor of fathers.

Sen. Randolph is a director of Big Brothers of the national capital area and wanted not only to honor fathers, but highlight the problem of caring for fatherless boys. This is the goal of Big Brothers, namely, the one man - one boy idea of a Big Brother as a companion for a fatherless boy.

Rep. Resnick was also interested in emphasizing this.

However, all acts of congress, ranging from resolutions to major appropriations bills, must go to the budget bureau for approval. Reason: To keep congressional spending down and make sure an act of congress conforms to the President's policies and budget. So when the father's day resolutions reached the budget bureau, its seriousminded officials took out their pencils and tried to figure how much father's day would cost the nation.

They figured hard. But for the life of them they couldn't figure how father's day would cost President Johnson, or the taxpayers, anything. There was no provision in the resolutions for spending anything, not even speeches made. The resolutions merely proposed that the nation pay tribute on a family-to-family basis to the male head of the family and consider the importance of befriending children who weren't fortunate enough to have fathers.

Even so, the budget bureau was suspicious. Maybe there was a hidden dollar some place behind the resolutions which they didn't see.

Finally, it decided to ok the father's day resolutions for one year only. This would give them time to see whether the expenditure of hidden dough was involved.

ONE SENATOR AGAINST FATHERS

When the resolutions reached the full senate, they had the sympathetic support of Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the Democratic leader, father of a comely Irish Colleen who occasionally, not often, listens to the advice of the senator.

But the resolutions aroused the opposition of Mansfield's assistant Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, who claimed that father's day was for the benefit of merchants.

"Why is it necessary to have a national father's day?" Sen. Long asked.

"The distinguished senator from Louisiana," remonstrated Sen. Randolph, "would not, I am sure, want to have invalidated the legislation which created mother's day. Would he want that act rescinded now by the congress?"

"I am not a mother," replied Sen. Long, "and I do not feel particularly qualified to speak on the subject."

Sen. Randolph rallied to the defense of both fathers and mothers, and after further discussion Sen. Long, with a weather eye on the Dodd hearings and charges of conflicts of interest, concluded: "Insomuch as I am a father and have something of an interest in this matter, I should like to ask to be excused from voting on it."

Other members of the senate, 95 per cent of them fathers, chose to ignore their conflict of interest and voted themselves and the rest of the fathers of the nation a resolution of tribute on father's day.

However, as far as the Johnson administration is concerned, it is on record in favor of fathers for 1966 only, not 1967. Because of the budget bureau, this weighty problem will have to be tackled again next year.

HAIRCUTS AND RESTROOMS

While the budget bureau cast a jaundiced eye at father's day, the House of Representatives cast a jaundiced eye at free haircuts, free bottled water for senators, and other picayunish problems. Members of the House do not get free haircuts or bottled water.

"Is there any money in this bill for free haircuts for spring water?" inquired Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, during debate on the $172 million housekeeping bill for congress.

"So far as I know," replied Rep. George Andrews, D-Ala., "there never has been any money appropriated for free haircuts on this side and neither have we made any money available for mountain water for house members."

GROSS -- "Now, is there any money in this bill for the manning of the automatic elevators in the Rayburn building?"

ANDREWS -- "There is a small amount in the bill, but it is not being used."

GROSS -- "These elevators operate as well, if not better, without being manned. It would be my hope that no one gets the idea that simply because there is money available they should go out and hire operators."

Gross also raised a fuss about the lack of an adequate restroom on the house side for women visitors to the capitol.

"If we can have a car wash on the main floor of the garage in the Rayburn building, I certainly think a women's public restroom should be established on one of the main floors of the house side of the capitol," he complained.

On this point both Democrats and Republicans agreed. Public restrooms for women on the main floor became a bipartisan policy.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

PERILOUS ROAD TO OUTSVILLE

An acquaintance stopped me on the street. "Congratulations," he said.

"About what?"

"The hat."

"What about the hat?"

"Well, so's yours."

"That's what I mean," he replied. "Congratulations to us both. We have the courage to be different."

Now, it is true that we were the only people in sight wearing broad-brimmed straws. Nine out of the ten male passers-by were bare headed and the rest had perched on the tops of their heads these high-crowned things with practically no brims that make you look like a dialect Swede in a burlesque show.

I didn't tell my friend that I sunburn easily and that the hat was my doctor's suggestion. Instead, I basked with him in our superiority over the fashion-cowed rabble. What other excuse is there for a summer hat except shade? We had the moral courage to lean against the winds of current asininity. We were from "Outsville," and proud of it.

BUT this poses a distressing question: How far out of Insville and into Outsville should a man go? Where do you draw the line between forthright defiance of a silly fashion of the moment and an idiotic transgression of normal decorum?

A tired woman slips her shoes off in a darkened movie. She doesn't do it in church, where everyone would notice. The opera diva opens her mouth wide on the big notes and we cry, "Bravo!" But the rest of us must conceal a yawn with our hands. The gentleman still walks to the curbside of his lady, although the splash of mire from the carriage wheels is no longer a problem. Custom. Tradition.

The man who follows a tradition, even an obsolete or foolish one, advertises himself as a player by the rules. The rules are not consistent. The pinch of snuff and the sneeze, which made an 18th Century dandy, would produce a bum today. The appreciative after-dinner belch, de rigeur in the southern Sudan, would horrify the western hostess. But the rule-abiders, in any culture and any age, are people who keep a check-rein on themselves. There's some virtue in it.

THE professional rebels of today are like the evangelical members of antisuperstition societies who run under ladders, break mirrors and cut behind black cats. The rebel tries to break all the rules. If the rule is cleanliness the rebel is dirty. If the rule is a struggle for neatness or beauty the rebel is a studied slob. If Society requires certain standards of decorum the rebel behaves like a goat. He's strictly from Outsville.

But his problem is that he's also in Insville. He is hoping to impress and gain acceptance among other rebels whose rule is no-rule. He is caught in a habit pattern more rigid than that which afflicts the "square." More rigid and more idiotic, for it is contrary to nature for a man or woman to strive for repulsiveness.

THE compulsive crowd-follower is only slightly superior. He checks his common sense and does whatever "they" are doing. "They" are the arbiters of fashion, the "cognoscenti", the "jet set." The skinny-legged lady in the thigh-length skirt, and the fat woman in the Bikini are inadvertent clowns.

Slavish attention to what "they" are wearing or doing or attending gives the unsure personality the comfort of the herd. "They" even represent acceptable habits of thought. Some of the slick magazines have been talking reverently about the "mainstream" of American opinion. If you are out of the "mainstream" you are odd. If you are to the right of it you are very odd, possibly dangerous.

There have been many "mainstreams" of human thought. Four hundred years ago the divine appointment of kings was taken for granted. Three hundred years ago witches were for burning. Two hundred years ago preachers found holy sanction for human slavery. It will be interesting to see how history treats some of the economic and social dogmas in the current "mainstream.'

BUT because the past was often wrong it doesn't follow that all old values and venerable philosophies may be safely junked. True, the Wright brothers did what our ancestors thought impossible, but a lot of Darius Greens flapped their wings futilely as they fell from barn lofts. The trick lies not in junking, but in refinement. There's more to philosophy than beard-growing, and Plato can still think rings around the beatnik.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Victor Reuther Leads ADA Group to Moscow.

Washington, D. C.: -- No one will deny that Victor George Reuther, the younger brother, has courage. He has fought the toughest. And now he is going to Moscow via Warsaw.

There will be searing criticism -- from in and out the labor movement.

Reuther's swift intellectualism makes it certain he is aware that the cascading news coverage will make him one of the world's most famed travelers and will recall an earlier bicycling trip through the Soviet with brother Walter.

During some of Victor's rounds abroad, Walter will be in Brussels, but he will not journey to the East.

The junior (54 - year - old) Reuther will leave here on July 6 as one of the leaders of a band of 37 voyagers gathered by the capital branch of the Americans For Democratic Action.

They have no mission to Moscow.

But Victor Reuther has a mission of his own which will make this a long hot summer for himself, his brother and the high command of American labor.

First, insiders see Victor's trip, coming so soon after the earthy battle between George Meany and Walter Reuther over foreign policy, as a long, high flare signaling the launching of the auto union's offensive against the AFL-CIO's inflexible, anti - Soviet, anti-Peking foreign policy.

The not very subtle hint of all this can be seen in the statement issued on June 16th by Walter Reuther in which he said:

"The leadership and the membership of the UAW, like many other Americans, are deeply disturbed about the growing negative character of AFL-CIO policy in the field of international affairs, of which the withdrawal of AFL-CIO delegates from the current International Labor Organization (ILO) conference is but the latest expression."

This is tough. This is blunt. This is open warfare.

The auto union constitutional convention, it should be noted, called for the recognition of Peking China and its admission to the United Nations.

Furthermore, the Reuthers want not only to "build bridges" to the Soviet bloc, but to construct clover leaves off the highways of history to the labor organizations of the USSR and Eastern Europe. Meany believes there are no such things as unions behind the Iron and Bamboo Curtains. He sees them as instruments of the state designed to discipline workers and set high - speed production norms. He's convinced they are under rigid control of the Communist Parties' central committee.

But Victor Reuther, head of the auto union's powerful and well - financed International Affairs Dept., could not care less what Meany thinks. Victor Reuther, as does his brother, wants to exchange labor delegations -- immediately if not sooner. He believes in this international cooperation. For months now the brothers Reuther have been trying to bring over a group of Soviet labor officials. The UAW had a Washington and Detroit itinerary all prepared. There were to be informal briefings and fraternal gatherings. The invitations had gone through the Citizen Exchange Corps, formerly Hostages For Peace.

But at the proverbial last minute, the U. S. State Dept. refused to grant the necessary visas. The AFL-CIO leadership had opposed them.

The official State Dept. rejection of the visa requests paralleled the AFL-CIO's objection: The Russians were no tourists. They were actually a labor delegation. Granting the entry permits would equate Soviet and U. S. unions and give the mission from Moscow unjustified status in global labor circles just at a time when the Communist bloc was pushing for a popular front of all labor.

Meany also had killed off a proposal by John A. Gronouski, U. S. ambassador to Poland, to send some Polish speaking unionists from his home state of Wisconsin to Poland.

Now Victor Reuther will see his old friend Gronouski in Warsaw. It is believed they will again plan to set up a labor exchange in the image of the cultural exchanges.

There is no doubt that Reuther will confer with the leaders of the USSR's All - Union Central Council of Trade Unions. There is no doubt in circles here that he will suggest exchanges between the auto union and the group of labor organizations which support the Reuther position.

There is no doubt that this will be the issue later this summer when the AFL-CIO's high command meets for a three-day discussion of American labor's foreign policy. Meany and the overwhelming bloc of U. S. labor chieftians will not retreat in their distaste for what they call totalitarian labor fronts set up by the Communist nations.

The Reuthers will then tell the Meany majority to jump into the Potomac -- that is, if it's a polite session -- and then proceed on their own with the bridge building.

The big question is, however, "Who will control the pontoon to the White House?"

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Gene Evans

The Christ Gospel church was scene of the June 10 wedding of Miss Rebecca Diane Meeks and Donald Gene Evans.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Meeks, 305 Illinois Ave., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Evans of Kennett.

The Rev. Al Bareson read the vows of the double ring ceremony at 8 p.m. before the altar lighted with candles in a large candelbra behind an arch of greenery. A basket of white gladioli appointed each side of the arch.

Mrs. Elmer Poage, organist, accompanied Mrs. Joe Fox, soloist, as she sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Wedding Prayer" as the couple knelt on the white satin prie dieu for the benediction.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin Chantilly lace covered gown. The bodice featured long tapered sleeves that came to points over the hands. A satin bow accented the back center of the dress. Her veil was a crown of pearls and sequins encircled with white net.

Barbara McRoy, friend of the bride, was maid of honor. Revelle Garrison and Merletta Hays, also friends of the bride, were bridesmaids. Debbie Meeks, sister of the bride, was flower girl and Mike Evans, brother of the groom was ring bearer.

The attendants wore blue chiffon, street-length dresses with full skirts. The bodices were fitted and styled with long sleeves. Their headpieces were blue pearl caps with shoulder-length veils of net. They carried bouquets of white pom poms trimmed in blue.

Johnny Liles of Kennett, friend of the groom, was best man. Danny Meeks, brother of the bride, and Stanley Medland of Camden, Tenn., friend of the groom, were groomsmen. Danny and Travis Causey were ushers.

The bride's mother wore a pink street-length dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother wore a bronze and white whipped cream dress that featured long sleeves. Her accessories were bronze and a corsage of white carnations completed her ensemble.

The reception was held in the community room of Security National Bank. The bride's table was covered with a blue table cloth. A three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple centered the table. A crystal punch bowl appointed each end. White candles in gold holders decorated each side of the cake. A wedding bell hung above. Nuts and mints were also served.

Assisting at the reception were Pauletta Meeks, sister-in-law of the bride, Patricia Goetz and Durinda Connor, friends of the bride. Voilet Lay was in charge of the guest book.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fagan of Paducah, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Bartly McElhaney of Hampton, Ky., and Joe Meeks of Russelville, Ark.

Astrodome Jinks To Cardinals

The Kansas City Athletics launched a late inning drive last night to nudge the Cleveland Indians 7-5 despite Rocky Colavito's two home runs and five runs batted in.

Elsewhere the St. Louis Cardinals were stunned in the first inning and dropped a 4-1 decision to the Houston Astros in the Astrodome.

The A's bats were silent until the sixth when they pushed across four runs. They added single runs in the next three innings paced by outfielder Mike Hershberger, who wound up with four hits in five trips.

Jim Gosger, Danny Cater, Dick Green and Phil Roof each had two hits for Kansas City. Lew Krausse gained his fourth win against three setbacks.

Cleveland's Colavito rapped his 12th and 13th homeruns and added a single to account for all the Indians' runs. The outfielder's bid for a third homer was turned into an out when Gosger reached over the fence to grab the ball.

Houston jumped on Cardinal starter Nelson Briles for three runs in the first inning and coasted to victory behind Larry Dierker, who scattered nine hits in his final appearance before two weeks of Army reserve duty.

The Cards scored their lone run in the third on singles by Lou Brock and Phil Gagliano and infield outs by Curt Flood and Tito Francona.

St. Louis will send Ray Washburn 4-3, against the Astros' Mike Cuellar 5-0 tonight at Houston.

The ferret, a domestic breed of the wild polecat, is in danger of extinction in the United States because the prairie dog, its main source of food, has almost disappeared. Ferrets have been used since the days of the Romans in destroying rats and other vermin and in driving rabbits from their burrows. The ferret's hold on quarry is as obstinate as a bulldog's.

Astrodome Jinks To Cardinals

The Kansas City Athletics launched a late inning drive last night to nudge the Cleveland Indians 7-5 despite Rocky Colavito's two home runs and five runs batted in.

Elsewhere the St. Louis Cardinals were stunned in the first inning and dropped a 4-1 decision to the Houston Astros in the Astrodome.

The A's bats were silent until the sixth when they pushed across four runs. They added single runs in the next three innings paced by outfielder Mike Hershberger, who wound up with four hits in five trips.

Jim Gosger, Danny Cater, Dick Green and Phil Roof each had two hits for Kansas City. Lew Krausse gained his fourth win against three setbacks.

Cleveland's Colavito rapped his 12th and 13th homeruns and added a single to account for all the Indians' runs. The outfielder's bid for a third homer was turned into an out when Gosger reached over the fence to grab the ball.

Houston jumped on Cardinal starter Nelson Briles for three runs in the first inning and coasted to victory behind Larry Dierker, who scattered nine hits in his final appearance before two weeks of Army reserve duty.

The Cards scored their lone run in the third on singles by Lou Brock and Phil Gagliano and infield outs by Curt Flood and Tito Francona.

St. Louis will send Ray Washburn 4-3, against the Astros' Mike Cuellar 5-0 tonight at Houston.

OCEANPORT, N. J. AP --

The ferret, a domestic breed of the wild polecat, is in danger of extinction in the United States because the prairie dog, its main source of food, has almost disappeared. Ferrets have been used since the days of the Romans in destroying rats and other vermin and in driving rabbits from their burrows. The ferret's hold on quarry is as obstinate as a bulldog's.

MID-YEAR AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK OUTLINED

About January 1, I devoted an article to Missouri agricultural outlook for 1966. Since that time, a number of changes and questions have developed as far as agriculture is concerned. Wheat, which has been a surplus crop, is now in considerable demand. Soybeans were a good price, and although the outlook was good, I think prices are better than anyone expected. The Missouri cotton acreage was reduced 25 per cent by acreage limitations. Much of the acreage upon which farmers had planned to plant cotton, corn, and other crops will now be devoted to soybean production due to unfavorable weather. Consequently, we will have a considerably larger acreage of soybeans than anyone had anticipated. For these and other reasons, many farmers have been wondering how various aspects of agriculture would fare during the remainder of the year. Just recently, we received our Mid-year Outlook from our agricultural economists so I would like to briefly summarize their predictions for most of the agricultural commodities produced the year.

As far as beef cattle are concerned, fed cattle prices are expected to continue under pressure through June; however, some improvement in price is forecast for June and July if cattle feeders continue marketings at a rate which will not permit a build-up in weights. If they continue to market cattle at heavier weights as they did during late April and May, this will keep pressure on prices through the summer and thereby retard any price increase.

Hog marketings during late April and early May were near the level of a year earlier, and June marketings are expected to be near the 1965 level. Following this, a five to eight percent increase is indicated for July and August. Hog prices will probably show a slight increase from late May levels and are expected to peak at weekly average prices of $26.00 per cent for 200-220 pound barrows and gilts at National Stockyards in June. Then, pressure from larger marketings should result in a downward trend in late June or July.

With production during the January-through-April period averaged about four percent less than production during the same period of 1965. Production during 1966 is expected to be two to five per cent below that of last year. Milk prices are expected to be five to nine per cent higher throughout the 1966 marketing year than they were during the 1965 marketing year.

Wheat disappearance including both domestic use and exports for the 1965-66 marketing year which ends June 30 is expected to be around 1600 million bushels. This would reduce our wheat carryover on June 30 to 550 to 560 million bushels -- the smallest since 1957. Wheat prices are expected to remain above the price support loan rate during the harvest season, and the average price received by farmers during the 1966-67 marketing year will exceed the price of $1.34 per bushel estimated for 1965-66.

A record crop of soybeans is indicated by a number of signs including increased price supports, larger exports, governmental regulations permitting beans to be planted on feed grain areas, the expected increase in soybean acreage due to farmers failure to get corn, cotton, and other crops planted due to unfavorable weather. The total supply of soybean oil in the U.S. is expected to increase about five percent this year. Exports are running about the same as last year and should increase in the near future. The reduction in the acreage of cotton produced will mean that a much lower volume of cottonseed oil and meal will be produced which will lend considerable encouragement to soybean markets. With all factors considered, the minimum soybean production will be above the 900 million bushel mark. The estimated carryover of 40 to 50 million bushels of soybeans at the end of this marketing year is slightly above the 30 million bushel carryover of last year but not enough to affect prices for the remainder of the marketing year. Soybean prices are now above $3.00 at Missouri terminals, and indications are that they will not fall below this figure in the near future.

Egg prices are expected to decline seasonally and will be close to last year's prices until late summer. Increased production this fall due to the big increase in pullet placements will decrease the usual seasonal price rise with fourth quarter prices well below last year.

The immediate price outlook for broilers is bright but prices are expected to be lower after Labor Day as supplies of turkey and pork will be greater.

How much can I afford to pay for additional farm land? We hear this question many times during the year. The following points are suggested as a guide to help determine the advisability of buying more acres.

FIRST, decide the probable cropping system you would use on the land. Use expected prices for the crops to be grown and add the income from each of the crops to get the total gross receipts or income.

SECOND, estimate as best you can the costs for each of the crops to be grown. Records on your own land would help to determine the cash costs connected with each crop. These costs would include soil treatments, seed, pesticides, harvesting, gas, oil and a charge for the additional labor required.

Then THIRDLY, decide if the additional land will likely affect the net returns on your present farm operation. With the same equipment you may be able to handle the extra acres, but if planting and harvesting is done over a larger period, this may reduce slightly your current crop yields. So if such a decrease may happen, then the dollar amount of this reduced yield should be added to the cost of operating the land you are considering purchasing.

The FOURTH consideration is to subtract the estimated costs from the gross receipts of the proposed cropping plan. If you included labor as one of the annual costs, the returns would be for management and risk. Next, capitalize the net returns you are willing to accept on the investment. If you could earn 5% by investing your money in some other way, perhaps this is the rate to use. Thus a 5% return divided into the expected net returns per acre would give you the total amount the land is worth to you based upon how the land will be used and your expected costs in obtaining the production. One other big consideration is that of the extra operating money needed to farm this land. Can you make arrangements for this and not restrict your present operation? It may be wise to line up any additional operating credit needs before going ahead with the land purchase.

Last but not least, if you purchase the additional land, carefully estimate payments for principal and interest and allow a little margin for an occasional poor year.

Timely Tips

A FASHION HINT FOR WOMEN

What kind of clothes would a woman with so-called middle age spread select? A large abdomen and disphragm is associated with middle age spread, as the figure gets less exercise and fat accumulates in the least exercised areas of all, the abdomen and diaphragm. People of all ages may have this problem because it is also caused by poor posture and sagging muscles. This figure problem can be corrected by cutting out extra snacks, getting the right kind of exercise, straightening up posture; or wearing foundation garments to flatten the bulge.

"The next step is to look for clothing styles that will modify the abdominal curve." Perhaps the most important thing a woman with this figure problem to remember is not to wear clothes too tight. If she would have a pleasing figure silhouette, dresses that show signs of strains across the middle are dead giveaways to a large abdomen and diaphragm. Think about the appearance of a too-tight skirt on a figure with a prominent abdomen, when seen from the side. Even on a perfect figure a skirt that is too tight is not attractive, let alone a figure with a protruding abdomen.

It is just as important to have a loose easy fit in the bodice too. If the bodice looks like its under strain, it will call attention to that area. A dress which exposes every bulge of the diaphragm and has tightness under the arm contributes to an all over too-tight appearance. Another dress may be worn by the same figure and be more attractive to look at if it has a loose bloused bodice and the tightness taken out of the armhole area.

Garments that end at the hipline are certainly to be avoided, and are especially bad if the colors contrast as in a black skirt and white blouse. Suit jackets that end at the fullest part of the hips should also be avoided.

Most up and down lines are flattering to the figure with large hips as they add height and decrease from the width of the figure. One frequent way that women with large hips use vertical lines is with pleated skirts. If the pleats are well spaced, they will be flattering. However, knife pleats are too evenly spaced to be slimming. They are so monotonous they carry the eye across them and make the hipline appear even wider.

Diversified Family

The deer family is greatly diversified in size, ranging from the massive moose, which may grow seven feet tall at the shoulders and weigh up to 1,400 pounds, to the pudu of the Chilean Andes, which weighs up to 24 pounds and stands only 13½ inches at the shoulders.

LOATHSOME RATS

Rats have been loathed and feared by people, especially since the outbreak of the Bubonic Plague in Europe in the 14th century.

People don't fear rats as much today as in the past because rats don't pose as much of a threat to human life. This is assuming that we continue to keep them in a semi-controlled state.

However, rats are loathed as much today as ever. Even if you exclude possible health problems, rats are still lowly loathsome critters. Food seizures in the U.S. by Federal Food & Drug Administration inspectors from April 1962 through March 1963 involved 151 seizures of 3,930,934 lbs. of food valued at $210,435.92. Of this, 413,021 lbs. valued at $69,961.10 was destroyed; 3,517,913 pounds valued at $108,549 was converted to animal feed, etc.; and fines amounted to $31,925. This says nothing about the millions of dollars of animal feed destroyed, damaged or contaminated by these thieves of the night each year. With these kinds of losses it is time to declare war on rats.

In order to win any war it is necessary to know something about the characteristics, traits, and habits of your enemy.

Armed with this knowledge, you are in a much better position to attack them at their weakest point.

PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS AND HABITS

Rats are color blind and their world is composed of various shades of gray. Vision is restricted in rats to several feet. However, they can detect movement at considerable distances. Well-developed senses of smell and taste aid them in avoiding poorly-prepared toxic baits. Hearing is exceptionally good and they can apparently recognize sounds of higher frequency than the average human ear.

The organs of touch are very sensitive hairs in the whiskers and around the body which explains why rats like to run next to walls. These sensory organs assure them that no danger can approach from that side thus counter-balancing the inadequateness of their eyesight. Regular travel routes taken by rats are readily recognized by dark greasy marks left by the animals. Rats are afraid of anything new. Even the displacement of a familiar object will disturb them for some time.

Rats are good swimmers. They will sometimes swim through sewer lines and enter homes through floor drains. It is not uncommon for them to climb sewer pipes as high as the second floor and emerge from toilet stools through the water seals. A large rat can reach vertically 18 inches. With a running start, he can jump 3 feet or more and from a standing start about 2 feet. He can jumpa horizontal distance of 8 feet while dropping less than 14 feet. Rats have been known to fall to the ground from a four-story building without apparetn building without apparent harm. It is possible for young rats to get through openings 1/2 inch in diameter.

The front incisor teeth of a rat grow at the rate of 5 inches a year. Therefore, the rat must gnaw to live. If the new growth is not worn down by constant gnawing, the teeth will curve back in the form of tusks and the animal will die of starvation. Rats can gnaw through lead pipes, work through 3 inches of poorly-mixed concrete, cut through oak planks or sun-dried bricks.

While the Norway rat is primarily a burrowing animals, it can climb when necessary. However, it prefers to live in burrows that are from 8 to 18 inches below the surface of the ground. A long established colony may have a maze of tunnels extending the length of a city block. In light sandy soil, they have been known to burrow as deep as 6 feet.

Rats usually start their search for food and water after sunset each day. They apparently feed twice during the night; once shortly after dark and again in the early morning. The average adult rat needs 3/4 to 1 ounce of dry food and 1 1/2 ounces of water every 24 hours. Without food, they will start to weaken in 3 to 4 days, but without water, weakness sets in after about 1 to 2 days.

Rats generally travel over a wider area but their movements are also correlated with the sufficiency of food, shelter, and water in their immediate vicinity. Rats that are disturbed, however, may move as much as 4 miles in the space of a week.

Rats will take almost any food that either man or domestic animals eat, which explains the great ease with which they adapt themselves to almost any environment. While they can thrive on garbage, decaying meat, and other spoiled foods, rats prefer choice, clean and fresh food.

CONTROL

The best control of rats is to take away the food and shelter that permits them to survive. Traps, gases, and poisons will only temporarily halt a growing rat population.

USE OF ANTICOAGULANT POISONS

Warfarin, Pival, Fumarin, Diphacinone, and PMP are all known as "anticoagulant poisons" because they prevent the normal clotting of blood and cause rats and mice to die by internal bleeding. All of these poisons are available in the form of ready-made baits. Some may be purchased as concentrates for home-made mixtures.

A single dose of either of these anticoagulant poisons will not ordinarily kill unless a very large amount is consumed. They are most effective when taken in small amounts for over five feedings one or two days apart. Thus, ample quantities of bait should be made available for two weeks or more, since some individual rats and mice may not eat it when first exposed.

BAIT PLACEMENT

For RAT CONTROL, place bait at or near places where rats are accustomed to feed. Use shallow pans, preferably not more than ONE-HALF INCH high. If the bait is in a bag, tack one end down, and to hasten acceptance, make a small cross slit in the bag. Remember that bait must be continuously available to rats. CHECK PLACEMENTS DAILY or at not more than two-day intervals and replenish the supply as needed.

GARDEN TOMATOES

What kind of a tomato crop will you have this year? This is a question we will not be able to answer for another four to six weeks. But the care you give your tomatoes the next four weeks -- the month of June -- will largely determine the yields and quality you will receive.

Tomato performance depends on heredity and environment. Heredity involves the type of plant, kind of fruit, ability to set blossoms, and some disease resistance, among other factors. Environment involves light, water, soil, fertilizer, temperature, insect control, and disease prevention.

We have already made the decision as to heredity when we selected the tomato variety or hybrid we have in our garden. I hope this has been a wise selection.

However, whatever variety we have chosen, performance will depend largely on the "environmental care" it receives during June.

Since our season is a little late this year, there is still time to consider pruning tomatoes. More and more gardeners are finding the advantages of planting fewer tomatoes and staking, tying, and pruning. Benefits include earlines, more uniform production, cleaner fruit and thus better quality, and ease in spraying and harvesting.

Many devices have been "invented" to stake or train tomato plants. Some are rather ingenious. Some are elaborate. But the simplest, and perhaps still the most inexpensive, is a 1 x 2 inch stake, 6 feet long, pointed at one end.

Drive in the stake about four inches to the side of the plant. Place the stake in the row so it won't interfere with cultivation. Drive it deeply enough to anchor it firmly. One or two stems of the tomato plant will be traned to this stake. Stems should be tied to the stake with a soft cord of suitable material that will give support, yet not cut into the tomato plant.

Pruning is simply removal of suckers or side shoots. Suckers or side shoots arise at the point of attachment of each leaflet branch to the main stem. Remove suckers when they are three or four inches long. A simple outward and downward movement will easily remove them. Do not cut them out with a knife, you can transmit diseases by this method.

If you want to prune to the two-stem method, allow the sucker that grows just below the first flower cluster to form the second stem. Then prune each stem.

Fertilizers are important during the period after fruit set. You can stimulate growth and increase yields by applying nitrogen fertilizers to your tomatoes during the latter part of June. Use one pound of ammonium nitrate per 100 feet of row, or one rounded tablespoon per plant. Scatter the fertilizer around the base of the plant, but at least 12 inches from the stem. Do not get fertilizer on the foliage.

Disease prevention is most important during June. This is early blight time, Septoria leaf spot can also become a problem. Regular weekly spraying of zineb, maneb, or captan is highly recommended. Use two tablespoons per gallon of water. Be sure to spray the undersides of leaves.

It would be advisable to add an insecticide to your fungicide spray during the latter part of June and early July to prevent serious damage from tomato fruitworm and tomato hornworm. Use either carbaryl (Sevin) methoxychlor, or TDE. Follow directions on the label.

Finally, provide your tomatoes with adequate moisture. This can be effected by rainfall, irrigation, weed control, and mulching.

Weed control is important to prevent moisture loss and to avoid competition for light and air circulation around the plants. Mulching will control weeds and also reduce surface evaporation of moisture. A mulch will also allow for easier penetration of rainfall or irrigation water.

SUMMER SAFETY HINT

Vacation time is almost here and everyone is looking forward to an enjoyable summer. Will it be an enjoyable summer for you? Unfortunately many will be victims of accidents of one kind or another during the next few weeks. Accidents never take a vacation.

We are actually safer today from accidents than we were many years ago according to statistics. But the fact remains that we can still do a lot to make our homes and communities safer places to life.

Here are five hints that you can follow as your contribution to safe living. Look around -- is your basement, garage, or steps leading from one floor to another an obstacle course? Are these areas piled high with material which could cause a fall or permit a fire to start? How about the area around other buildings? Are these areas full of litter and junk just waiting for someone to be careless?

The second hint concerns your highway driving habits. Is your car always kept in good mechanical order? Do you keep the windshield clean at all times? Is your driveway designed so that you have good visibility in both directions when entering the street or highway? Do you watch your speed and always adjust it to the road and driving conditions? Do you watch for slow moving vehicles, such as farm tractors, at all times? Check on your driving habits and see if you can't make some definite improvements.

Since summertime is almost here, many of us will want to spend more time out of doors. The third hint concerns water safety habits such as: never swimming alone, always wearing a life preserver when in a boat, and getting up to date on artificial respiration.

If you work with farm requipment there are several questions to ask yourself. Do you ever clean or adjust machinery while it is running? Do you have your vehicles properly marked for highway travel? The extra time it takes to be safe is time well spent.

The fifth safety hint concerns protection against fire. While it is true that our furnaces and heating equipment are not in use now, it will be time to use them again before we know it. It's a good idea to check all heating equipment, clean and repair chimneys, examine electric power supply lines, and remove any

About January 1, I devoted an article to Missouri agricultural outlook for 1966. Since that time, a number of changes and questions have developed as far as agriculture is concerned. Wheat, which has been a surplus crop, is now in considerable demand. Soybeans were a good price, and although the outlook was good, I think prices are better than anyone expected. The Missouri cotton acreage was reduced 25 per cent by acreage limitations. Much of the acreage upon which farmers had planned to plant cotton, corn, and other crops will now be devoted to soybean production due to unfavorable weather. Consequently, we will have a considerably larger acreage of soybeans than anyone had anticipated. For these and other reasons, many farmers have been wondering how various aspects of agriculture would fare during the remainder of the year. Just recently, we received our Mid-year Outlook from our agricultural economists so I would like to briefly summarize their predictions for most of the agricultural commodities produced the year.

As far as beef cattle are concerned, fed cattle prices are expected to continue under pressure through June; however, some improvement in price is forecast for June and July if cattle feeders continue marketings at a rate which will not permit a build-up in weights. If they continue to market cattle at heavier weights as they did during late April and May, this will keep pressure on prices through the summer and thereby retard any price increase.

Hog marketings during late April and early May were near the level of a year earlier, and June marketings are expected to be near the 1965 level. Following this, a five to eight percent increase is indicated for July and August. Hog prices will probably show a slight increase from late May levels and are expected to peak at weekly average prices of $26.00 per cent for 200-220 pound barrows and gilts at National Stockyards in June. Then, pressure from larger marketings should result in a downward trend in late June or July.

Milk production during the January-through-April period averaged about four percent less than production during the same period of 1965. Production during 1966 is expected to be two to five per cent below that of last year. Milk prices are expected to be five to nine per cent higher throughout the 1966 marketing year than they were during the 1965 marketing year.

Wheat disappearance including both domestic use and exports for the 1965-66 marketing year which ends June 30 is expected to be around 1600 million bushels. This would reduce our wheat carryover on June 30 to 550 to 560 million bushels -- the smallest since 1957. Wheat prices are expected to remain above the price support loan rate during the harvest season, and the average price received by farmers during the 1966-67 marketing year will exceed the price of $1.34 per bushel estimated for 1965-66.

A record crop of soybeans is indicated by a number of signs including increased price supports, larger exports, governmental regulations permitting beans to be planted on feed grain areas, the expected increase in soybean acreage due to farmers failure to get corn, cotton, and other crops planted due to unfavorable weather. The total supply of soybean oil in the U.S. is expected to increase about five percent this year. Exports are running about the same as last year and should increase in the near future. The reduction in the acreage of cotton produced will mean that a much lower volume of cottonseed oil and meal will be produced which will lend considerable encouragement to soybean markets. With all factors considered, the minimum soybean production will be above the 900 million bushel mark. The estimated carryover of 40 to 50 million bushels of soybeans at the end of this marketing year is slightly above the 30 million bushel carryover of last year but not enough to affect prices for the remainder of the marketing year. Soybean prices are now above $3.00 at Missouri terminals, and indications are that they will not fall below this figure in the near future.

Egg prices are expected to decline seasonally and will be close to last year's prices until late summer. Increased production this fall due to the big increase in pullet placements will decrease the usual seasonal price rise with fourth quarter prices well below last year.

The immediate price outlook for broilers is bright but prices are expected to be lower after Labor Day as supplies of turkey and pork will be greater.

How much can I afford to pay for additional farm land? We hear this question many times during the year. The following points are suggested as a guide to help determine the advisability of buying more acres.

FIRST, decide the probable cropping system you would use on the land. Use expected prices for the crops to be grown and add the income from each of the crops to get the total gross receipts or income.

SECOND, estimate as best you can the costs for each of the crops to be grown. Records on your own land would help to determine the cash costs connected with each crop. These costs would include soil treatments, seed, pesticides, harvesting, gas, oil and a charge for the additional labor required.

Then THIRDLY, decide if the additional land will likely affect the net returns on your present farm operation. With the same equipment you may be able to handle the extra acres, but if planting and harvesting is done over a larger period, this may reduce slightly your current crop yields. So if such a decrease may happen, then the dollar amount of this reduced yield should be added to the cost of operating the land you are considering purchasing.

The FOURTH consideration is to subtract the estimated costs from the gross receipts of the proposed cropping plan. If you included labor as one of the annual costs, the returns would be for management and risk. Next, capitalize the net returns you are willing to accept on the investment. If you could earn 5% by investing your money in some other way, perhaps this is the rate to use. Thus a 5% return divided into the expected net returns per acre would give you the total amount the land is worth to you based upon how the land will be used and your expected costs in obtaining the production. One other big consideration is that of the extra operating money needed to farm this land. Can you make arrangements for this and not restrict your present operation? It may be wise to line up any additional operating credit needs before going ahead with the land purchase.

Last but not least, if you purchase the additional land, carefully estimate payments for principal and interest and allow a little margin for an occasional poor year.

Place for Dancing

The term orchestra is originally derived from the Greek which meant a place for dancing. In the ancient Greek theater, dancers and instrumentalists performed in a semicircle between the audience and the stage.

Timely Tips

A FASHION HINT FOR WOMEN

What kind of clothes would a woman with so-called middle age spread select? A large abdomen and disphragm is associated with middle age spread, as the figure gets less exercise and fat accumulates in the least exercised areas of all, the abdomen and diaphragm. People of all ages may have this problem because it is also caused by poor posture and sagging muscles. This figure problem can be corrected by cutting out extra snacks, getting the right kind of exercise, straightening up posture; or wearing foundation garments to flatten the bulge.

"The next step is to look for clothing styles that will modify the abdominal curve." Perhaps the most important thing a woman with this figure problem to remember is not to wear clothes too tight. If she would have a pleasing figure silhouette, dresses that show signs of strains across the middle are dead giveaways to a large abdomen and diaphragm. Think about the appearance of a too-tight skirt on a figure with a prominent abdomen, when seen from the side. Even on a perfect figure a skirt that is too tight is not attractive, let alone a figure with a protruding abdomen.

It is just as important to have a loose easy fit in the bodice too. If the bodice looks like its under strain, it will call attention to that area. A dress which exposes every bulge of the diaphragm and has tightness under the arm contributes to an all over too-tight appearance. Another dress may be worn by the same figure and be more attractive to look at if it has a loose bloused bodice and the tightness taken out of the armhole area.

Garments that end at the hipline are certainly to be avoided, and are especially bad if the colors contrast as in a black skirt and white blouse. Suit jackets that end at the fullest part of the hips should also be avoided.

Most up and down lines are flattering to the figure with large hips as they add height and decrease from the width of the figure. One frequent way that women with large hips use vertical lines is with pleated skirts. If the pleats are well spaced, they will be flattering. However, knife pleats are too evenly spaced to be slimming. They are so monotonous they carry the eye across them and make the hipline appear even wider.

Diversified Family

The deer family is greatly diversified in size, ranging from the massive moose, which may grow seven feet tall at the shoulders and weigh up to 1,400 pounds, to the pudu of the Chilean Andes, which weighs up to 24 pounds and stands only 13½ inches at the shoulders.

LOATHSOME RATS

Rats have been loathed and feared by people, especially since the outbreak of the Bubonic Plague in Europe in the 14th century.

People don't fear rats as much today as in the past because rats don't pose as much of a threat to human life. This is assuming that we continue to keep them in a semi-controlled state.

However, rats are loathed as much today as ever. Even if you exclude possible health problems, rats are still lowly loathsome critters. Food seizures in the U.S. by Federal Food & Drug Administration inspectors from April 1962 through March 1963 involved 151 seizures of 3,930,934 lbs. of food valued at $210,435.92. Of this, 413,021 lbs. valued at $69,961.10 was destroyed; 3,517,913 pounds valued at $108,549 was converted to animal feed, etc.; and fines amounted to $31,925. This says nothing about the millions of dollars of animal feed destroyed, damaged or contaminated by these thieves of the night each year. With these kinds of losses it is time to declare war on rats.

In order to win any war it is necessary to know something about the characteristics, traits, and habits of your enemy.

Armed with this knowledge, you are in a much better position to attack them at their weakest point.

PHYSICAL CHARACTERISTICS AND HABITS

Rats are color blind and their world is composed of various shades of gray. Vision is restricted in rats to several feet. However, they can detect movement at considerable distances. Well-developed senses of smell and taste aid them in avoiding poorly-prepared toxic baits. Hearing is exceptionally good and they can apparently recognize sounds of higher frequency than the average human ear.

The organs of touch are very sensitive hairs in the whiskers and around the body which explains why rats like to run next to walls. These sensory organs assure them that no danger can approach from that side thus counter-balancing the inadequateness of their eyesight. Regular travel routes taken by rats are readily recognized by dark greasy marks left by the animals. Rats are afraid of anything new. Even the displacement of a familiar object will disturb them for some time.

Rats are good swimmers. They will sometimes swim through sewer lines and enter homes through floor drains. It is not uncommon for them to climb sewer pipes as high as the second floor and emerge from toilet stools through the water seals. A large rat can reach vertically 18 inches. With a running start, he can jump 3 feet or more and from a standing start about 2 feet. He can jumpa horizontal distance of 8 feet while dropping less than 14 feet. Rats have been known to fall to the ground from a four-story building without apparetn building without apparent harm. It is possible for young rats to get through openings 1/2 inch in diameter.

The front incisor teeth of a rat grow at the rate of 5 inches a year. Therefore, the rat must gnaw to live. If the new growth is not worn down by constant gnawing, the teeth will curve back in the form of tusks and the animal will die of starvation. Rats can gnaw through lead pipes, work through 3 inches of poorly-mixed concrete, cut through oak planks or sun-dried bricks.

While the Norway rat is primarily a burrowing animals, it can climb when necessary. However, it prefers to live in burrows that are from 8 to 18 inches below the surface of the ground. A long established colony may have a maze of tunnels extending the length of a city block. In light sandy soil, they have been known to burrow as deep as 6 feet.

Rats usually start their search for food and water after sunset each day. They apparently feed twice during the night; once shortly after dark and again in the early morning. The average adult rat needs 3/4 to 1 ounce of dry food and 1 1/2 ounces of water every 24 hours. Without food, they will start to weaken in 3 to 4 days, but without water, weakness sets in after about 1 to 2 days.

Rats generally travel over a wider area but their movements are also correlated with the sufficiency of food, shelter, and water in their immediate vicinity. Rats that are disturbed, however, may move as much as 4 miles in the space of a week.

Rats will take almost any food that either man or domestic animals eat, which explains the great ease with which they adapt themselves to almost any environment. While they can thrive on garbage, decaying meat, and other spoiled foods, rats prefer choice, clean and fresh food.

CONTROL

The best control of rats is to take away the food and shelter that permits them to survive. Traps, gases, and poisons will only temporarily halt a growing rat population.

USE OF ANTICOAGULANT POISONS

Warfarin, Pival, Fumarin, Diphacinone, and PMP are all known as "anticoagulant poisons" because they prevent the normal clotting of blood and cause rats and mice to die by internal bleeding. All of these poisons are available in the form of ready-made baits. Some may be purchased as concentrates for home-made mixtures.

A single dose of either of these anticoagulant poisons will not ordinarily kill unless a very large amount is consumed. They are most effective when taken in small amounts for over five feedings one or two days apart. Thus, ample quantities of bait should be made available for two weeks or more, since some individual rats and mice may not eat it when first exposed.

BAIT PLACEMENT

For RAT CONTROL, place bait at or near places where rats are accustomed to feed. Use shallow pans, preferably not more than ONE-HALF INCH high. If the bait is in a bag, tack one end down, and to hasten acceptance, make a small cross slit in the bag. Remember that bait must be continuously available to rats. CHECK PLACEMENTS DAILY or at not more than two-day intervals and replenish the supply as needed.

GARDEN TOMATOES

What kind of a tomato crop will you have this year? This is a question we will not be able to answer for another four to six weeks. But the care you give your tomatoes the next four weeks -- the month of June -- will largely determine the yields and quality you will receive.

Tomato performance depends on heredity and environment. Heredity involves the type of plant, kind of fruit, ability to set blossoms, and some disease resistance, among other factors. Environment involves light, water, soil, fertilizer, temperature, insect control, and disease prevention.

We have already made the decision as to heredity when we selected the tomato variety or hybrid we have in our garden. I hope this has been a wise selection.

Since our season is a little late this year, there is still time to consider pruning tomatoes. More and more gardeners are finding the advantages of planting fewer tomatoes and staking, tying, and pruning. Benefits include earliness, more uniform production, cleaner fruit and thus better quality, and ease in spraying and harvesting.

Many devices have been "invented" to make or train tomato plants. Some are rather ingenious. Some are elaborate. But the simplest, and perhaps still the most inexpensive, is a 1 x 2 inch stake, 6 feet long, pointed at one end.

Drive in the stake about four inches to the side of the plant. Place the stake in the row so it won't interfere with cultivation. Drive it deeply enough to anchor it firmly. One or two stems of the tomato plant will be traned to this stake. Stems should be tied to the stake with a soft cord of suitable material that will give support, yet not cut into the tomato plant.

Pruning is simply removal of suckers or side shoots. Suckers or side shoots arise at the point of attachment of each leaflet branch to the main stem. Remove suckers when they are three or four inches long. A simple outward and downward movement will easily remove them. Do not cut them out with a knife, you can transmit diseases by this method.

If you want to prune to the two-stem method, allow the sucker that grows just below the first flower cluster to form the second stem. Then prune each stem.

Fertilizers are important during the period after fruit set. You can stimulate growth and increase yields by applying nitrogen fertilizers to your tomatoes during the latter part of June. Use one pound of ammonium nitrate per 100 feet of row, or one rounded tablespoon per plant. Scatter the fertilizer around the base of the plant, but at least 12 inches from the stem. Do not get fertilizer on the foliage.

Disease prevention is most important during June. This is early blight time, Septoria leaf spot can also become a problem. Regular weekly spraying of zineb, maneb, or captan is highly recommended. Use two tablespoons per gallon of water. Be sure to spray the undersides of leaves.

It would be advisable to add an insecticide to your fungicide spray during the latter part of June and early July to prevent serious damage from tomato fruitworm and tomato hornworm. Use either carbaryl (Sevin) methoxychlor, or TDE. Follow directions on the label.

Weed control is important to prevent moisture loss and to avoid competition for light and air circulation around the plants. Mulching will control weeds and also reduce surface evaporation of moisture. A mulch will also allow for easier penetration of rainfall or irrigation water.

SUMMER SAFETY HINT

Vacation time is almost here and everyone is looking forward to an enjoyable summer. Will it be an enjoyable summer for you? Unfortunately many will be victims of accidents of one kind or another during the next few weeks. Accidents never take a vacation.

We are actually safer today from accidents than we were many years ago according to statistics. But the fact remains that we can still do a lot to make our homes and communities safer places to life.

Here are five hints that you can follow as your contribution to safe living. Look around -- is your basement, garage, or steps leading from one floor to another an obstacle course? Are these areas piled high with material which could cause a fall or permit a fire to start? How about the area around other buildings? Are these areas full of litter and junk just waiting for someone to be careless?

The second hint concerns your highway driving habits. Is your car always kept in good mechanical order? Do you keep the windshield clean at all times? Is your driveway designed so that you have good visibility in both directions when entering the street or highway? Do you watch your speed and always adjust it to the road and driving conditions? Do you watch for slow moving vehicles, such as farm tractors, at all times? Check on your driving habits and see if you can't make some definite improvements.

Since summertime is almost here, many of us will want to spend more time out of doors. The third hint concerns water safety habits such as: never swimming alone, always wearing a life preserver when in a boat, and getting up to date on artificial respiration.

If you work with farm requipment there are several questions to ask yourself. Do you ever clean or adjust machinery while it is running? Do you have your vehicles properly marked for highway travel? The extra time it takes to be safe is time well spent.

The fifth safety hint concerns protection against fire. While it is true that our furnaces and heating equipment are not in use now, it will be time to use them again before we know it. It's a good idea to check all heating equipment, clean and repair chimneys, examine electric power supply lines, and remove any flammable material from near furnace or heating ducts. This can be done much more easily now than after the heating system is turned on again this fall.

If there's a common problem among soybean producers . . . it's the annual problem of cocklebur control. Some of these farmers are asking for control help.

M-U Extension Weed Control Specialist L. E. Anderson says there is no best way to control cocklebur in soybeans because situations differ on individual farms.

Cultivation is effective in controlling cocklebur between the rows. . . but it does not get the plants growing in the row itself. Pre-emergents Amiben and sodium P-C-P will control the cocklebur that germinate near the soil surface . . . .but are less effective in controlling seedlings that originate from seeds germinating deeper down in the soil.

A post-emergence application of 2,4-D butyric acid made between early and mid-bloom will control many of the cocklebur. . . .but some injury to the soybeans will result.

Unfortunately, each method of control has its limitations and no single course of action will give complete control of cocklebur in soybeans.

FLY CONTROL IN DAIRY BARNS

M-U Extension Dairymen say good fly control in dairy barns starts with good sanitation both outside and inside the barn. It also means that fly control measures such as baits and lavicides should be started before the fly population has built up.

M-U Guide 7000 . . . "Fly Control on Dairy Cattle" gives complete information about control measures of various insects. You can get a copy at your County University Extension center.

When spraying be sure directions on the container are followed to the letter. Baits are effective if started early before fly population is built up and then continued throughout the season.

ANTI-BLOAT DRUG HAS BEEN DEVELOPED

The discovery of a new drug for prevention of legume bloat is expected to result in considerable savings to farmers and ranchers, says Melvin Bradley, MU extension livestock specialist.

The new drug, poloxalene, developed at Kansas State University, has been found to be 100 per cent effective in preventing legume bloat, says KSU.

Legume bloat, one of the causes of livestock losses, is brought on by excessive foaming of rumen contents of dairy and beef cattle, and sheep. Poloxalene is a anti-foaming agent. It is marketed under the trademark, "Bloat Guard."

Bradley says use of the new drug will make it possible for farmers and cattlemen to more widely use good legumes as pasture.

To meet the needs of cattle producers, an anti-bloat product had to meet several requirements such as:

It had to prevent bloat for at least 12 hours in animals fed green legumes. It had to act rapidly, be palatable, and economical enough for general use.

It could not leave any residue in milk or body tissues, or cause any bad effects on health, reproduction, rumen function, feed intake, or milk quality or quantity.

Kansas State University says poloxalene satisfied all these demands in tests in various sectors of the country including Kansas, Montana, Iowa, Illinois, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

"Bloat Guard" is a dry product. It can be spread over grain as a top dressing. If it is fed to cattle a few minutes before they are pastured or are fed freshly cut legumes, bloat will be prevented.

Animals weighing 1,000 or more pounds receive 20 grams of the drug per day. Smaller animals receive 10 grams per day.

Computers Are Being Accepted

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- Farmer acceptance of the idea of using computers to solve farm management problems has been outstanding, reports Tom Brown, extension agricultural economist at the Univesity of Missouri.

Brown and Myron Bennett, farm business management specialist, have conducted meetings in Carroll, Saline, and Chariton Counties to explain a pilot program of the University that will provide farmers with computer help.

At a meeting in Keytesville Wednesday night, 10 Chariton County farmers enrolled in the association.

A week earlier, at a meeting in Marshall, 10 Saline County farmers indicated interest in signing up on the computer programs.

County extension directors in the three county area indicated other farmers have called and told them they want to sign up.

Bennett will start working with the farmers in the association July 1.

The actual start of the farm business analysis and other features of the computer program will be started January 1, Bennett said.

Farmers who want to sign up after the limit of 50 members is reached this year will be put on a waiting list for next year, Bennett said. At that time 25 additional members will be enrolled.

By the third year, the association will be up to 100 members.

In the pilot program, farmers are paying a membership fee of $150 a year. This is about half the expected cost, Bennett said.

The rest of the cost is being taken care of by the University and the local county extension councils.

The program will provide an individualized electronic accounting system to farmers, Bennett said. Information gathered in the system will be used on the farm to make it more profitable.

In explaining the program, Brown said, that when a farmer runs short of time to get his field work done, he can buy a bigger tractor to help him get more done in the same amount of time.

When a farmer ran short of management time there has been little he could do. But now, computers can help him make more and better decisions. The computers advantage is that it can quickly gather facts and figures into usable form. From this information, decisions on the farm business can be made.

POINTERS FOR PLEASANT TRAVELING

Summer time is vacation time. Do you plan to travel to a lake, the mountains, or to visit relatives?

Have plans well made before leaving home. Encourage cooperation of the family in keeping finances within the bounds you have established. Know how much money you can spend and decide, as a family, how to get the most pleasure from it. Young people will have a greater appreciation for money if they handle some of it, so have an understanding of who is to do what before you leave home.

Assign responsibilities for certain jobs while traveling, such as packing the luggage, emptying the litter bag, acting as navigator, paying toll charges, tidying the car, keeping expenses of the trip, etc.

Travel light! Try to anticipate the type of clothing you will need so you can keep the amount to a minimum. You may be able to wear old clothing that can be discarded along the way for no one will know your hose had a big runner when you put them on!

Laundering need not be a problem. You can do a bit of exploring while you patronize the coin laundry.

Games, toys, a thermos of water, snacks, and a pillow are standard equipment for the younger set and may be appreciated by adults, too. A plastic bag with a damp washcloth is a must when children are part of the cargo.

Buy several pairs of hose, stockings and socks that match rather than one pair of a kind. Saves time sorting. Even the youngest member of your family can "pick out his." Saves money, too!

Choose clothing that doesn't require a lot of care---especially ironing.

When spraying be sure directions on the container are followed to the letter. Baits are effective if started early before fly population is built up and then continued throughout the season.

ANTI-BLOAT DRUG HAS BEEN DEVELOPED

The discovery of a new drug for prevention of legume bloat is expected to result in considerable savings to farmers and ranchers, says Melvin Bradley, MU extension livestock specialist.

The new drug, poloxalene, developed at Kansas State University, has been found to be 100 per cent effective in preventing legume bloat, says KSU.

Legume bloat, one of the causes of livestock losses, is brought on by excessive foaming of rumen contents of dairy and beef cattle, and sheep. Poloxalene is a anti-foaming agent. It is marketed under the trademark, "Bloat Guard."

Bradley says use of the new drug will make it possible for farmers and cattlemen to more widely use good legumes as pasture.

To meet the needs of cattle producers, an anti-bloat product had to meet several requirements such as:

It had to prevent bloat for at least 12 hours in animals fed green legumes. It had to act rapidly, be palatable, and economical enough for general use.

It could not leave any residue in milk or body tissues, or cause any bad effects on health, reproduction, rumen function, feed intake, or milk quality or quantity.

Kansas State University says poloxalene satisfied all these demands in tests in various sectors of the country including Kansas, Montana, Iowa, Illinois, Mississippi, and Louisiana.

"Bloat Guard" is a dry product. It can be spread over grain as a top dressing. If it is fed to cattle a few minutes before they are pastured or are fed freshly cut legumes, bloat will be prevented.

Animals weighing 1,000 or more pounds receive 20 grams of the drug per day. Smaller animals receive 10 grams per day.

Perpetual Silence

Central Australia's Warramunga people require all female relatives of a deceased male to remain silent for a year or two as a form of mourning. The restriction includes remote kin and thus most tribal women usually are condemned to perpetual silence, so they become proficient in sign language.

Computers Are Being Accepted

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- Farmer acceptance of the idea of using computers to solve farm management problems has been outstanding, reports Tom Brown, extension agricultural economist at the Univesity of Missouri.

Brown and Myron Bennett, farm business management specialist, have conducted meetings in Carroll, Saline, and Chariton Counties to explain a pilot program of the University that will provide farmers with computer help.

The limit of 50 farmers enrolled for the first year operation of a Farm Business Management Assn. is fast being reached, Brown reported.

At a meeting in Keytesville Wednesday night, 10 Chariton County farmers enrolled in the association.

A week earlier, at a meeting in Marshall, 10 Saline County farmers indicated interest in signing up on the computer programs.

County extension directors in the three county area indicated other farmers have called and told them they want to sign up.

Bennett will start working with the farmers in the association July 1.

The actual start of the farm business analysis and other features of the computer program will be started January 1, Bennett said.

Farmers who want to sign up after the limit of 50 members is reached this year will be put on a waiting list for next year, Bennett said. At that time 25 additional members will be enrolled.

By the third year, the association will be up to 100 members.

In the pilot program, farmers are paying a membership fee of $150 a year. This is about half the expected cost, Bennett said.

The rest of the cost is being taken care of by the University and the local county extension councils.

The program will provide an individualized electronic accounting system to farmers, Bennett said. Information gathered in the system will be used on the farm to make it more profitable.

In explaining the program, Brown said, that when a farmer runs short of time to get his field work done, he can buy a bigger tractor to help him get more done in the same amount of time.

When a farmer ran short of management time there has been little he could do. But now, computers can help him make more and better decisions. The computers advantage is that it can quickly gather facts and figures into usable form. From this information, decisions on the farm business can be made.

POINTERS FOR PLEASANT TRAVELING

Summer time is vacation time. Do you plan to travel to a lake, the mountains, or to visit relatives?

Have plans well made before leaving home. Encourage cooperation of the family in keeping finances within the bounds you have established. Know how much money you can spend and decide, as a family, how to get the most pleasure from it. Young people will have a greater appreciation for money if they handle some of it, so have an understanding of who is to do what before you leave home.

Assign responsibilities for certain jobs while traveling, such as packing the luggage, emptying the litter bag, acting as navigator, paying toll charges, tidying the car, keeping expenses of the trip, etc.

Travel light! Try to anticipate the type of clothing you will need so you can keep the amount to a minimum. You may be able to wear old clothing that can be discarded along the way for no one will know your hose had a big runner when you put them on!

Laundering need not be a problem. You can do a bit of exploring while you patronize the coin laundry.

Games, toys, a thermos of water, snacks, and a pillow are standard equipment for the younger set and may be appreciated by adults, too. A plastic bag with a damp washcloth is a must when children are part of the cargo.

Buy several pairs of hose, stockings and socks that match rather than one pair of a kind. Saves time sorting. Even the youngest member of your family can "pick out his." Saves money, too!

Choose clothing that doesn't require a lot of care---especially ironing.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I can't get mail at home because my mother has X-ray eyes that can read right through envelopes, if you know what I mean. Please answer immediately as I'm clutched.

I am 16 years old and my boy friend Hank is 17. What I need to know right away is if a girl can catch acne from a boy. We are on the verge of doing some rather heavy necking and I want to know what the risks are. Rush your advice as I have a date with Hank for Saturday night. -- IN SEARCH OF INFORMATION

Dear In Search Of: No, you cannot catch acne from Hank but OTHER things can happen which would make acne seem like small potatoes. My advice to you is to cool it, Sister.

Dear Ann Landers: Too much pride can be deadly -- as you have said so often in your column. I wish I had been wise enough to take your word for it because now I am choking on my pride.

A few years ago I was in love with a wonderful man. I know he loved me, too. He showed it in everything he said and did. He was kind and thoughtful and decent and greatly respected by everyone who knew him.

So what was my problem? He was about one inch shorter than I and of slight build. We never discussed it but I am sure I weighed more than he did.

I always wanted to marry a broad-shouldered, husky, bruite of a man -- someone I could look up at. My girlhood dream was to be carried into the bedroom on my wedding night.

Well, I married a husky, handsome brute and now I realize that the little guy is a lot bigger than my husband will ever be. Please print my letter for the benefit of others who haven't yet made the decision. -- NEW HAVEN FOOL

Dear New Haven: Here's your letter and thank you for having written it. When the word comes from the person who has been there it packs a double wallop. Are you listening, students?

Dear Ann Landers: Several years ago you said something in your column that I liked so much I cut it out and carried it in my wallet until it became yellowed with age and I could no longer read it. It went something like this: "Children need examples more than they need critics."

Our children were small then and both my husband and I tried to follow that advice. I am happy to say it has paid off.

Our two sons behave so much like their dad that it is comical. Of course it is flattering to dad when he sees his children trying to imitate him. And I feel the same when my little girl, now seven, pretends she is me when she feeds her dolly.

I wish you would re-emphasize the importance of parents setting a good example for their children. We all need to be reminded of these homey truths from time to time. -- LEARNED FROM YOU

Dear Learned: Since the clipping has been discarded I'd like to supply you with another one for your wallet. It expresses the same idea and the man who said it was Francis Quarles, 'way back in 1635.

"If thou desire to see thy child virtuous, let him not see his father's vices. Examples direct more than precepts; such as thy behavior is before thy children's faces, will their behavior be behind your back?"

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hearnes Wants Boating Safety

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has issued an appeal to boaters to join with the Missouri Boat Commission and other enforcement agencies in promoting safety afloat on Missouri waters.

"Safety of our boaters on Missouri waters is of utmost importance," he said, "and requires suitable and continuing programs in education and enforcement to help save lives and prevent boating injuries and damage."

"In this proclamation, he named July 3 -- 9 as Safe Boating Week in Missouri and called upon all recreational boaters to help promote safety during the special observance, "as well as throughout the year."

The Governor urged public cooperation in safety programs of the Boat Commission, the United States Coast Guard, the American Red Cross, and the Supplementary work of Yacht Clubs, Coast Guard Auxiliary groups and Power Squadron Organizations."

"Meanwhile, Acting Executive Secretary, John Buford, requests boaters to, "use common sense in operating your vessels and always stress safety among your passengers."

"There is plenty of room for everyone on our lakes and rivers," he said, "adding that Missouri boaters can really enjoy cruising, but they must cooperate in observing the laws and regulations on boating."

Street Improvements OK'd at East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE -- Mayor Ed Felts has announced this week that the city has approved resolutions declaring the necessity for the construction of hot mix asphalt paving plus soil cement base and concrete curbing for four streets within the city limits.

The streets named in the resolutions were Lincoln Street from Martin to the Railroad tracks and from Pine Street to Highway 80, Welborn Road from North Street to Traylor Road, Bill Pope Road to North Street to Traylor Road and Traylor Road from Wellborn Road to Bill Pope Road.

The nature and scope of the improvements is estimated at a cost of $5.39 per lineal foot on Pine Street down to $5.06 per lineal foot of abutting property on the other three streets, to be charged against lots and tracts of land abutting the improvements is to be made by funds from special tax bills and special assessments to the property owners along the improvement.

The mayor explained that this manner of financing the construction is because, in the opinion of the Board of Aldermen, the general revenue fund of the city is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure of this size to pay for the improvement.

Landowners will have five years in which to pay for their share of the cost of the improvement and the work will be put up for bid with no bid being acceptable that does not come within the $5.39 per lineal foot rate.

Mayor Felts also pointed out that should the city undertake this project on its own it would only be able to improve possibly four blocks per year with the question as to which surfacing the work begins on becoming a controversial issue. Drainage tile necessary will be financed by the city and will not be charged to the property owners.

According to Mayor Felts this is the general procedure of street building as authorized by the state legislature and is the same process employed by neighboring towns of Charleston and Sikeston in their building program.

Army Finds New Remedy For Malaria

By JOHN T. WHEELER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army medical researchers reported today a major breakthrough in the fight against malaria, next to the Viet Cong the most savage enemy American troops face in Viet Nam.

A spokesman for the surgeon general's office said diaminodiphenylsulfone (DDS), a drug long used in treating leprosy, was found in Viet Nam field tests to cut in half the number of men who are stricken by malaria.

Soldiers who receive the drug but still come down with the disease should be able to return to duty in two or three weeks, instead of the present six to eight weeks. Chances of a relapse should be slashed from 40 per cent to 4 per cent.

Last year 1,801 U.S. troops were stricken by malaria with 63,035 man days lost. The latest complete monthly figures which fluctuate widely show that one of every 20 men could expect to be stricken during their one year tour.

The drug has been approved by the armed forces epidemiological board and the Food and Drug Administration, the spokesman said. Use of the drug by all U.S. troops in danger areas is expected soon. Stockpiles of DDS already are on hand in Viet Nam.

The drug is aimed specifically at falciparum, which drugs now in use are virtually helpless to prevent. Falciparum, a severe form of malaria, is restricted to the Vietnamese highlands.

A top figure in the research section of the surgeon general's office said even though the number of cases should be halved with the use of DDS, the figure still was too high "and we certainly haven't whipped this thing yet."

Walter Reed Hospital's Army Institute of Research headed the extensive test project that ended two weeks ago. The Army considers the malaria problem urgent enough that necessary final approval from the Food and Drug Administration was arranged in a telephone call.

Present plans are to give GIs in the highlands one 25 milligram pill each day at a cost of about a penny a dose. GIs would continue to use the pills for one month after leaving Viet Nam.

Malaria is transmitted by the Anopholes mosquito. DDS attacks the organism once it gets into the human system, preventing it from maturing and reproducing, thus helping to prevent the illness.

Queen Elizabeth's Visit May Stir up Religious Strife

By GODFREY ANDERSON

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) —Religious strife may pose security problems when Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip visit Northern Ireland next month.

Belfast remains a sectarian city in an ecumenical age. It takes religion seriously and its religious and political tensions are closely interwoven.

Protestant extremists have threatened the queen's hosts—Lord Erskine, governor of Northern Ireland, and his wife. They are angry that the governor vetoed their plan to name a new bridge, which the queen will open, for the late Lord Carson, Ulster's patriot Protestant hero. The bridge, the governor ruled firmly, will be called the Queen Elizabeth Bridge.

The Rev. Ian Paisley, leader of a militant sect called Free Presbyterians, says he will lead a march on the governor's residence July 2—two days before the queen arrives in Ireland. Paisley protests he is loyal to the queen but says he fears a takeover by the Roman Catholic Church in Northern Ireland. When the Archbishop of Canterbury went to Rome this spring for his historic meeting with Pope Paul VI, Paisley led a small but noisy opposition.

In Northern Ireland, about two-thirds of the population is Protestant, mainly Presbyterian or Church of Ireland-Anglican; and one-third Roman Catholic. The Republic, to its south, is 95 per cent Catholic.

Northern Ireland probably is the only place left in the British Isles where being a Catholic or a Protestant can affect a person's whole life—where he lives, the kind of money he earns, the firm which is willing to employ him and the kind of job he can do.

Some Protestant firms will not employ Catholics at all. Others will give them only menial jobs. The Protestant Orangemen's lodges, set up to fight Roman Catholic influence, are still strong both in Parliament and Belfast City Hall. The slightest move may stir them to indignation and they can turn out thousands on the streets.

One difficulty is that religion is so closely bound with politics and business. The Unionist, conservative, party, which has long run the local government and sent 12 members to the London House of Commons, is an almost exclusively Protestant machine. Only in the last general election did one Belfast Roman Catholic gain a seat at Westminster.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I can't get mail at home because my mother has X-ray eyes that can read right through envelopes, if you know what I mean. Please answer immediately as I'm clutched.

I am 16 years old and my boy friend Hank is 17. What I need to know right away is if a girl can catch acne from a boy. We are on the verge of doing some rather heavy necking and I want to know what the risks are. Rush your advice as I have a date with Hank for Saturday night. -- IN SEARCH OF INFORMATION

Dear In Search Of: No, you cannot catch acne from Hank but OTHER things can happen which would make acne seem like small potatoes. My advice to you is to cool it, Sister.

Dear Ann Landers: Too much pride can be deadly -- as you have said so often in your column. I wish I had been wise enough to take your word for it because now I am choking on my pride.

A few years ago I was in love with a wonderful man. I know he loved me, too. He showed it in everything he said and did. He was kind and thoughtful and decent and greatly respected by everyone who knew him.

So what was my problem? He was about one inch shorter than I and of slight build. We never discussed it but I am sure I weighed more than he did.

I always wanted to marry a broad-shouldered, husky, brute of a man -- someone I could look up at. My girlhood dream was to be carried into the bedroom on my wedding night.

Well, I married a husky, handsome brute and now I realize that the little guy is a lot bigger than my husband will ever be. Please print my letter for the benefit of others who haven't yet made the decision. -- NEW HAVEN FOOL

Dear New Haven: Here's your letter and thank you for having written it. When the word comes from the person who has been there it packs a double wallop. Are you listening, students?

Dear Ann Landers: Several years ago you said something in your column that I liked so much I cut it out and carried it in my wallet until it became yellowed with age and I could no longer read it. It went something like this: "Children need examples more than they need critics."

Our children were small then and both my husband and I tried to follow that advice. I am happy to say it has paid off.

Our two sons behave so much like their dad that it is comical. Of course it is flattering to dad when he sees his children trying to imitate him. And I feel the same when my little girl, now seven, pretends she is me when she feeds her dolly.

I wish you would re-emphasize the importance of parents setting a good example for their children. We all need to be reminded of these homey truths from time to time. -- LEARNED FROM YOU

Dear Learned: Since the clipping has been discarded I'd like to supply you with another one for your wallet. It expresses the same idea and the man who said it was Francis Quarles, 'way back in 1635.

"If thou desire to see thy child virtuous, let him not see his father's vices. Examples direct more than precepts; such as thy behavior is before thy children's faces, will their behavior be behind your back?"

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hearnes Wants Boating Safety

Governor Warren E. Hearnes has issued an appeal to boaters to join with the Missouri Boat Commission and other enforcement agencies in promoting safety afloat on Missouri waters.

"Safety of our boaters on Missouri waters is of utmost importance," he said, "and requires suitable and continuing programs in education and enforcement to help save lives and prevent boating injuries and damage."

"In this proclamation, he named July 3 -- 9 as Safe Boating Week in Missouri and called upon all recreational boaters to help promote safety during the special observance, "as well as throughout the year."

The Governor urged public cooperation in safety programs of the Boat Commission, the United States Coast Guard, the American Red Cross, and the Supplementary work of Yacht Clubs, Coast Guard Auxiliary groups and Power Squadron Organizations."

"Meanwhile, Acting Executive Secretary, John Buford, requests boaters to, "use common sense in operating your vessels and always stress safety among your passengers."

"There is plenty of room for everyone on our lakes and rivers," he said, "adding that Missouri boaters can really enjoy cruising, but they must cooperate in observing the laws and regulations on boating."

Street Improvements OK'd at East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE -- Mayor Ed Felts has announced this week that the city has approved resolutions declaring the necessity for the construction of hot mix asphalt paving plus soil cement base and concrete curbing for four streets within the city limits.

The streets named in the resolutions were Lincoln Street from Martin to the Railroad tracks and from Pine Street to Highway 80, Welborn Road from North Street to Traylor Road, Bill Pope Road to North Street to Traylor Road and Traylor Road from Wellborn Road to Bill Pope Road.

The nature and scope of the improvements is estimated at a cost of $5.39 per lineal foot on Pine Street down to $5.06 per lineal foot of abutting property on the other three streets, to be charged against lots and tracts of land abutting the improvements is to be made by funds from special tax bills and special assessments to the property owners along the improvement.

The mayor explained that this manner of financing the construction is because, in the opinion of the Board of Aldermen, the general revenue fund of the city is not in a condition to warrant an expenditure of this size to pay for the improvement.

Landowners will have five years in which to pay for their share of the cost of the improvement and the work will be put up for bid with no bid being acceptable that does not come within the $5.39 per lineal foot rate.

Mayor Felts also pointed out that should the city undertake this project on its own it would only be able to improve possibly four blocks per year with the question as to which surfacing the work begins on becoming a controversial issue. Drainage tile necessary will be financed by the city and will not be charged to the property owners.

According to Mayor Felts this is the general procedure of street building as authorized by the state legislature and is the same process employed by neighboring towns of Charleston and Sikeston in their building program.

Army Finds New Remedy For Malaria

By JOHN T. WHEELER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army medical researchers reported today a major breakthrough in the fight against malaria, next to the Viet Cong the most savage enemy American troops face in Viet Nam.

A spokesman for the surgeon general's office said diaminodiphenylsulfone (DDS), a drug long used in treating leprosy, was found in Viet Nam field tests to cut in half the number of men who are stricken by malaria.

Soldiers who receive the drug but still come down with the disease should be able to return to duty in two or three weeks, instead of the present six to eight weeks. Chances of a relapse should be slashed from 40 per cent to 4 per cent.

Last year 1,801 U.S. troops were stricken by malaria with 63,035 man days lost. The latest complete monthly figures which fluctuate widely show that one of every 20 men could expect to be stricken during their one year tour.

The drug has been approved by the armed forces epidemiological board and the Food and Drug Administration, the spokesman said. Use of the drug by all U.S. troops in danger areas is expected soon. Stockpiles of DDS already are on hand in Viet Nam.

The drug is aimed specifically at falciparum, which drugs now in use are virtually helpless to prevent. Falciparum, a severe form of malaria, is restricted to the Vietnamese highlands.

A top figure in the research section of the surgeon general's office said even though the number of cases should be halved with the use of DDS, the figure still was too high "and we certainly haven't whipped this thing yet."

Walter Reed Hospital's Army Institute of Research headed the extensive test project that ended two weeks ago. The Army considers the malaria problem urgent enough that necessary final approval from the Food and Drug Administration was arranged in a telephone call.

Present plans are to give GIs in the highlands one 25 milligram pill each day at a cost of about a penny a dose. GIs would continue to use the pills for one month after leaving Viet Nam.

Malaria is transmitted by the Anopholes mosquito. DDS attacks the organism once it gets into the human system, preventing it from maturing and reproducing, thus helping to prevent the illness.

Aging Actor Plays Mean Tennis Game

MOORESTOWN, N.J. AP -- Actor Edward Everett Horton, 81, plays a mean game of tennis, by special octogenarian rules. The ball has to come to him, and he always wins.

Horton, a stage veteran of 56 years, now appearing in a near-by straw hat theater, visits the Haddon Wood Indoor Tennis Center, every day for a game with the club pro, Jim McCaffrey.

And so far, the robust, athletic McCaffrey has yet to win.

"You understand the rules of this game. You always return the ball to me and I will always be standing in the center of the court, unless I'm sitting down somewhere."

Later, he expanded on his game.

"Tilden, Budge, Dramer. They've all played this game. They found it inadvisable to hit to my backhand. I don't hit backhands."

McCaffrey tried Horton's backhand, serving to the actor's left. Horton waved his racket as the ball sailed past.

Another rule prohibits volleying, but apparently the most important one, says Horton, is "I always win."

"The first morning I lost 6-1," said McCaffrey, "The second morning I lost 6-0."

Reduced Drills Slated for First Line Reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the units in a 150,000-man first line Army Reserve force will reduce their training, starting in July, after undergoing about eight months of intensified drills to get them ready for possible emergency deployment.

The Army announced today that units in this National Guard-Reserve force will be able to cut back from 72 drills a year to 58, provided they can pass combat readiness and other operational tests in summer active duty training.

These units, which had trained at a rate of 48 drills a year until last November, were boosted to 72 drills under Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's drive to get them in condition for possible deployment.

The goal for that readiness program was June 30 and Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the National Guard Bureau, claimed recently that the "mobilization readiness" objective already has been reached.

The objective called for this "selected Reserve force" to reach a point where it could move to a mobilization station and to start advanced unit training unit training with only seven days alert notice, then to take eight weeks of brigade and division training.

BILINGUAL BOWLING—Guatemalan-born Vivian Jordan, 17, will reign as queen at the Miami, Fla., Bowling Tournament of the Americas July 13-17. Champion bowlers from 26 Western Hemisphere countries and territories are entered in the bilingual event.

Afflicted Child to Be Poster Girl for Measles Campaign

FORT WAYNE, Ind. AP -- Pretty Kim Fisher, handicapped by one of childhood's most common diseases - measles, will tour the nation in a campaign to prevent other children from suffering as she has.

Kim, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Fisher of Fort Wayne, was named poster girl Wednesday for a 50-state measles prevention campaign by the National Association for Retarded Children.

A perfectly normal 1-year-old, walking and speaking sentences, Kim was stricken at 2 with the so-called "hard measles," resulting in encephalitis, or brain inflammation. A second attack at 4 left the child deaf, unable to speak, unable to stand or even hold up her head.

Although Kim has shown marked improvement through speech therapy, physiotherapy and a high-powered hearing aid, a completely normal life is forever out of reach.

New Hole Opens In K.C. Driveway

KANSAS CITY, Kan. AP -- Another hole opened up Wednesday night in the Argentine residential district undermined by an abandoned quarry.

The latest cave-on, 10 to 12 feet in diameter, cracked open a driveway at the Ralph Crookman home at 4018 Gibbs Road. The Monty Flack home, just east at 4012 Bibbs Road, fell into the quarry last week.

The City Commission Wednesday authorized drillings to determine the exact extent of the quarry's underground boundaries before taking corrective measures.

Carpenter's New Job Confirmed

SAIGON AP -- The U. S. Command confirmed today that Capt. William S. Carpenter Jr., a paratroop hero of the Kontum Plateau battle, will become an aide to Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander on U.S. forces in Viet Nam. It means switching from field duty to a staff job.

Carpenter, 28, distinguished himself June 9 by calling in a napalm air strike and artillery fire on the position of his company of the U. S. 101st Airborne Division to prevent it from being annihilated by infiltrating North Vietnamese regulars.

A U. S. spokesman said Carpenter will become Westmoreland's aide in the near future.

Know Your Newspaper Better

Why the Paper Is Late . . .

You've Heard of Deadlines

A deadline is the last minute that anything can be accepted for the current issue . . . not, as many believe, the time to turn in news and advertising. So, if you and others are late in giving us news material, or an advertisement, then the paper may easily be late—there is much to do after the last news stories and advertisements are written.

Sometimes Mechanical Failure, Too

Yes, occasionally a machine may break down, or the press may get balky. These also can make the paper late. But when you think about it for a few moments, aren't you surprised at how often the paper isn't late? Despite late news and ads, equipment trouble, and peak loads of work, The Standard is usually on time. That's the way it should be!

Aging Actor Plays Mean Tennis Game

MOORESTOWN, N.J. AP -- Actor Edward Everett Horton, 81, plays a mean game of tennis, by special octogenarian rules. The ball has to come to him, and he always wins.

Horton, a stage veteran of 56 years, now appearing in a nearby straw hat theater, visits the Haddon Wood Indoor Tennis Center, every day for a game with the club pro, Jim McCaffrey.

And so far, the robust, athletic McCaffrey has yet to win.

"You understand the rules of this game. You always return the ball to me and I will always be standing in the center of the court, unless I'm sitting down somewhere."

Later, he expanded on his game.

"Tilden, Budge, Dramer. They've all played this game. They found it inadvisable to hit to my backhand. I don't hit backhands."

McCaffrey tried Horton's backhand, serving to the actor's left. Horton waved his racket as the ball sailed past.

Another rule prohibits volleying, but apparently the most important one, says Horton, is "I always win."

"The first morning I lost 6-1," said McCaffrey, "The second morning I lost 6-0."

"You are playing much better today," Horton told him.

Kim, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy W. Fisher of Fort Wayne, was named poster girl Wednesday for a 50-state measles prevention campaign by the National Association for Retarded Children.

A perfectly normal 1-year-old, walking and speaking sentences, Kim was stricken at 2 with the so-called "hard measles," resulting in encephalitis, or brain inflammation. A second attack at 4 left the child deaf, unable to speak, unable to stand or even hold up her head.

Although Kim has shown marked improvement through speech therapy, physiotherapy and a high-powered hearing aid, a completely normal life is forever out of reach.

New Hole Opens In K.C. Driveway

KANSAS CITY, Kan. AP -- Another hole opened up Wednesday night in the Argentine residential district undermined by an abandoned quarry.

The latest cave-on, 10 to 12 feet in diameter, cracked open a driveway at the Ralph Crookman home at 4018 Gibbs Road. The Monty Flack home, just east at 4012 Bibbs Road, fell into the quarry last week.

The City Commission Wednesday authorized drillings to determine the exact extent of the quarry's underground boundaries before taking corrective measures.

Carpenter's New Job Confirmed

SAIGON AP -- The U. S. Command confirmed today that Capt. William S. Carpenter Jr., a paratroop hero of the Kontum Plateau battle, will become an aide to Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander on U.S. forces in Viet Nam. It means switching from field duty to a staff job.

Carpenter, 28, distinguished himself June 9 by calling in a napalm air strike and artillery fire on the position of his company of the U. S. 101st Airborne Division to prevent it from being annihilated by infiltrating North Vietnamese regulars.

A U. S. spokesman said Carpenter will become Westmoreland's aide in the near future.

Know Your Newspaper Better

Why the Paper Is Late . . .

You've Heard of Deadlines

A deadline is the last minute that anything can be accepted for the current issue . . . not, as many believe, the time to turn in news and advertising. So, if you and others are late in giving us news material, or an advertisement, then the paper may easily be late—there is much to do after the last news stories and advertisements are written.

Sometimes Mechanical Failure, Too

Yes, occasionally a machine may break down, or the press may get balky. These also can make the paper late. But when you think about it for a few moments, aren't you surprised at how often the paper isn't late? Despite late news and ads, equipment trouble, and peak loads of work, The Standard is usually on time. That's the way it should be!

Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Jr.

CHARLESTON -- In a candlelighted ceremony Saturday at the First Baptist church at 7:30 p.m., Miss Jana Lane Atteberry became the bride of Charles Baxter Southern, Jr., of Caruthersville. Miss Attebery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Atteberry, route three, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Sr., of Caruthersville.

The choir loft was centered with a 17 branched candelabra and flanked by a pair of silver urns filled with hybride delphinium and white stock. The choir rail was banked with eucalyptus and flanked by two nine branched candelabra entwined with ecualyptus.

Mrs. R. A. Bess, aunt of the bride, was the organist and she accompanied Carter Fenton as he sang "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk organza with re-embroidered Alencon lace and seed pearls and sequins. The dress featured a scooped neckline with long sleeves and a crescent waistline. Attached to the back of the floor-length gown was a full-length chapel train. Her headpiece was a bouffant veil attached to a small crown of seed pearls. She carried a cascade of cattleya orchids and lily of the valley.

Mrs. W. J. Hunter of Memphis served as matron of honor. Mrs. J. H. Southern of Caruthersville, the groom's sister-in-law; Mrs. Betty Crader of Jackson and Mrs. Thomas Newman of St. Louis were bridesmaids.

They wore full-length gowns of mint green crepe with Empire waistlines with floating watteau panels in the back. On their heads, they wore mint green crepe flat bows with maline veiling and they carried crescent arrangements of white stephanotis and ivy.

The groom's father, Baxter Southern, served as best man. Groomsmen were J. H. Southern of Caruthersville, the groom's brother; R. C. Seeman of New Madrid, the groom's brother-in-law and James Boyd Atteberry, the bride's brother. Ushers were Richard Black of Jefferson City and Jim Herhold of St. Louis.

Mrs. Atteberry, the bride's mother, wore a pink ribbon lace dress with a pink veil hat and shoes and a pink cattleya orchid. The groom's mother wore a pink silk crepe with matching accessories and a pink orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the country home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was centered with a nine branch silver canelabra with the large wedding cake at one end and the silver punch bowl at the other end. Rice bags were given by the bride's cousins, Misses Jane and Carolyn Clemensen of St. Louis.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Robert Seeman of New Madrid, the groom's sister, and the bride's cousins, Mrs. Larry Brazel, Miss Taffi Brown and Miss Cathy Creed of Memphis, Tenn.

After the reception, the couple left for a trip to the Ozark mountains. For her going away costume the bride wore a brown and white cotton dress with white jacket and a white pique hat trimmed with brown velvet and matching accessories.

After their return, they will be at home in Caruthersville for the summer, but will move to New Orleans in the fall where the groom is a student in the Law School, Tulane University, New Orleans.

The bride is a graduate of Charleston high school and Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

During the past year she was a teacher at the Alma Schrader school in Cape Girardeau. In the fall she will begin teaching third grade at Laurel-McDonough school in New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Sr., entertained at 6:30 p.m. Friday with a dinner dance at the Holiday Inn in Sikeston for their son, Charles Baxter Southern, Jr., and his fiancee, Miss Atteberry and the members of their wedding party. The dinner was served buffet style to the 60 guests attending.

Garden Club Tours Park

The Meadow Lane Garden Club made tour of the State "Holly Conservation" Park near Dexter for their regular monthly meeting in June. The following members made the tour: Mrs. M. H. Davis, Mrs. Ruth Lee, Miss Effie Campbell, Mrs. J. E. Robinson, Mrs. Guy Calvin, Mrs. John H. Calvin and Mrs. Lenzie Beck.

At the park the group was met by Tom May, Stoddard County conservation agent, who served as official guide. May discussed the plans being made by the State Federation of Garden Clubs for the making of trails and other conveniences that the public may become more familiar with this native flora being conserved. May is, also, a collector of Indian relics and gave, as he displayed his collection, a very interesting presentation of this.

Of particular interest were the Spear Points used by the Palio culture of Indians 25,000 years ago. He displayed a rock and explained its being used for war paint, a familiar custom of Indians. He told of the use of many items in his collection such as relics used for saws, knives, Tomahawks and slate used for jewelry. May's collection consisted of some 4,000 pieces, all of which have been found in Stoddard county in the past three years.

Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Jr.

CHARLESTON -- In a candlelighted ceremony Saturday at the First Baptist church at 7:30 p.m., Miss Jana Lane Atteberry became the bride of Charles Baxter Southern, Jr., of Caruthersville. Miss Attebery is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Atteberry, route three, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Sr., of Caruthersville.

The choir loft was centered with a 17 branched candelabra and flanked by a pair of silver urns filled with hybride delphinium and white stock. The choir rail was banked with eucalyptus and flanked by two nine branched candelabra entwined with eucalyptus.

Mrs. R. A. Bess, aunt of the bride, was the organist and she accompanied Carter Fenton as he sang "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white silk organza with re-embroidered Alencon lace and seed pearls and sequins. The dress featured a scooped neckline with long sleeves and a crescent waistline. Attached to the back of the floor-length gown was a full-length chapel train. Her headpiece was a bouffant veil attached to a small crown of seed pearls. She carried a cascade of cattleya orchids and lily of the valley.

Mrs. W. J. Hunter of Memphis served as matron of honor. Mrs. J. H. Southern of Caruthersville, the groom's sister-in-law; Mrs. Betty Crader of Jackson and Mrs. Thomas Newman of St. Louis were bridesmaids.

They wore full-length gowns of mint green crepe with Empire waistlines with floating watteau panels in the back. On their heads, they wore mint green crepe flat bows with maline veiling and they carried crescent arrangements of white stephanotis and ivy.

The groom's father, Baxter Southern, served as best man. Groomsmen were J. H. Southern of Caruthersville, the groom's brother; R. C. Seeman of New Madrid, the groom's brother-in-law and James Boyd Atteberry, the bride's brother. Ushers were Richard Black of Jefferson City and Jim Herhold of St. Louis.

Mrs. Atteberry, the bride's mother, wore a pink ribbon lace dress with a pink veil hat and shoes and a pink cattleya orchid. The groom's mother wore a pink silk crepe with matching accessories and a pink orchid.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the country home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was centered with a nine branch silver canelabra with the large wedding cake at one end and the silver punch bowl at the other end. Rice bags were given by the bride's cousins, Misses Jane and Carolyn Clemensen of St. Louis.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Robert Seeman of New Madrid, the groom's sister, and the bride's cousins, Mrs. Larry Brazel, Miss Taffi Brown and Miss Cathy Creed of Memphis, Tenn.

After the reception, the couple left for a trip to the Ozark mountains. For her going away costume the bride wore a brown and white cotton dress with white jacket and a white pique hat trimmed with brown velvet and matching accessories.

After their return, they will be at home in Caruthersville for the summer, but will move to New Orleans in the fall where the groom is a student in the Law School, Tulane University, New Orleans.

The bride is a graduate of Charleston high school and Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

During the past year she was a teacher at the Alma Schrader school in Cape Girardeau. In the fall she will begin teaching third grade at Laurel-McDonough school in New Orleans.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baxter Southern, Sr., entertained at 6:30 p.m. Friday with a dinner dance at the Holiday Inn in Sikeston for their son, Charles Baxter Southern, Jr., and his fiancee, Miss Atteberry and the members of their wedding party. The dinner was served buffet style to the 60 guests attending.

Garden Club Tours Park

The Meadow Lane Garden Club made tour of the State "Holly Conservation" Park near Dexter for their regular monthly meeting in June. The following members made the tour: Mrs. M. H. Davis, Mrs. Ruth Lee, Miss Effie Campbell, Mrs. J. E. Robinson, Mrs. Guy Calvin, Mrs. John H. Calvin and Mrs. Lenzie Beck.

At the park the group was met by Tom May, Stoddard County conservation agent, who served as official guide. May discussed the plans being made by the State Federation of Garden Clubs for the making of trails and other conveniences that the public may become more familiar with this native flora being conserved. May is, also, a collector of Indian relics and gave, as he displayed his collection, a very interesting presentation of this.

Of particular interest were the Spear Points used by the Palio culture of Indians 25,000 years ago. He displayed a rock and explained its being used for war paint, a familiar custom of Indians. He told of the use of many items in his collection such as relics used for saws, knives, Tomahawks and slate used for jewelry. May's collection consisted of some 4,000 pieces, all of which have been found in Stoddard county in the past three years.

Chicago broke down. The Travelers rolled into the big city three hours too late to make their train for LaSalle.

In desperation they tried to reserve seats on another train or bus, but none were scheduled for LaSalle. No cab would consent to take them the extra ninety miles either.

There seemed to be no answer to the predicament, and the trip and the audition became only a daydream since they would not be able to meet the New York bus. Then Mrs. Lois Parsley relieved the regular stationmaster and gained permission for an express train to make an unscheduled stop to pick up the Travelers.

To the relief of the Travelers, the other acts had waited for them in LaSalle. Thanks to the Rock Island Line they had made it.

After arriving in New York, the Travelers had a difficult choice to make. Only one song could be used for the important television audition. Naturally, they chose the Rock Island medley and again the train came through to win the audition for them.

Out of the five hundred auditioning acts in New York, only ten were selected to appear on the amateur hour. After the selection a show was taped and will be seen on Channel 12 at 4:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The Travelers have been singing together for about two years. Originally, Russ Felker, Malcolm Lee, and Terry Burke began practicing and making a few appearances. Patty McMillin soon joined the group as the songstress, and later Sue Foster was added. They composed the Travelers for 1964-65.

Then the following fall Russ and Malcolm left for college, and Mike Hopkins and Steve Matthews filled in the gaps. Patty was also unable to continue so the group became a foursome.

When Russ and Terry first began playing around with the idea of a folk singing group, one of their favorite albums was the Travelers Three, so they took the Travelers as a name.

When Sue and Patty joined, the new quintet adopted the name since they sang many of the same songs.

Before the New York trip, the Travelers practiced every night, and now they practice at least twice a week. "We really do not have a leader, but Terry is the oldest member and usually takes the lead if someone needs to," said Sue.

To remain amateurs, they are not allowed to have a contract of any kind. However, the singers do play at clubs, private parties, organizations, schools, contests, and other functions.

At first they were slightly overshadowed by an older Sikeston folk-singing group, the Folklores. However, as time passed, they became better known in Sikeston and around the area.

Before appearing on the show, the Travelers had to sign a contract not to solicit votes in any way; they may merely invite people to vote for them.

The voting is designed on the order of the United States electoral college. A certain number of votes is assigned to each state, and the act which receives the most votes from a state receives all of the electoral votes for that state.

The audition and the taping were the highlights of the trip to New York, but along the way the Travelers also squeezed in time to visit the Empire State building, Greenwich Village, the United Nations, Radio City Music Hall, and Broadway where they saw Hello, Dolly.

On the return trip they made a stopover to Washington, D.C. to visit Washington's monument, the Lincoln memorial, Arlington Cemetery, the Smithsonian Institute, and the United States Capitol.

When college splits the group again this fall, some of them hope to continue to sing together. Russ, Terry, and Malcolm have already formed the Brandywine Three and want to appear at resorts and dinner clubs in the future.

Although for the immediate future plans are rather indefinite, as Sue said, "Even if the Travelers do not continue to sing together next year, we have had some valuable experiences working and singing together in the past which none of us will forget.

COTTON

figures improved farming? The incomes was raised from $2960 in 1960, to $4,200 in 1965, and we expect to raise it to $4600 in 1966, with a per capita income of $1600. The gap in farm income with other workers is closing rapidly. The long battle on cotton is bringing dividends, and you may rest assured it is not being felt in Congress by your farm leaders. They will battle to keep the 16 million acreage allotment and the good leadership you now have in your agricultural states, will help win the battle."

Haskell Holman, state auditor, gave count of state affairs in the afternoon session. "As your bookkeeper, I which to say your state is on a sound cash basis. Your executive branch of your governor, lieutenant governor, secretary, attorney general and myself, together with your legislative body, are your safeguards. We cannot expend when the cash is not there. Every expense item of $2000 or more must have a sealed bid. Your state has only one form of income, and that is income from the pockets of the taxpyers. If you want additional services, you must be willing to pay for it."

The closing speaker at the afternoon session was Rep. Paul Jones. "The bill on domestic payments now enacted a week ago will help the cotton growers, but some persons have the mistaken idea that if their cotton was plowed up they would receive a 9 cent payment and then plant to soybeans. The bill provides only when the cotton would not be planted. Those who plowed up their cotton were not complying with the intent of the law", he said.

"The law was made to apply to other crops as well. The Public Law 480 tightens the bill on foreign surplus and the foreign governments must prove their intent and reduce other commodities. A bill now in the House calls for community development, especially in rural areas, to help industry come in. I have supported the amendments where communities will take equal cooperation in their participation."

The banquet session was held at the high school gymnasium.

The principal speaker, Sen. George McGovern, was introduced by Sen. Symington.

"You have a fighting group of farm legislators from Missouri, and I am glad to assist them. Your midwest legislators are bringing their needs across to Congress, and success will be yours. Congress knows the well-being of agriculture to sound economy, and now speak out in great force, and the effectiveness on the American farmer.

"The American agriculture can be prosperous in the years ahead, if we have sound farm programs and a foreign policy which makes the proper use of our production to win the peace. The cotton producers have recognized the importance of world trade. Our surpluses for export depressed domestic farm prices.

"The realization of the effect of foreign markets and the need for our products has changed many attitudes. There is a growing need for a Food for Freedom program, with payments to bring returns up to an acceptable level and competitive in the world market.

"The challenging crisis for the rest of this century is the race between human consumption and population. This calls for expansion of food and fiber. Hunger is a serious problem in the world. It is more killing and maiming than gunfire, and a greater threat to future mankind than the nuclear bomb.

"Just last year I intoduced a bill in Congress to increase food and fiber assistance a half billion dollars a year for the next seven years. With all our food producing know how we could not reach the demand at our present rate by the year 2000. Neither our national security nor our moral and political situation in the world will permit us to turn our backs on the Number one problem of the last third of the 20th century."

"We have already seen a 10 per cent increase in rice acreage; a 15 per cent increase in wheat acreage, and a much better outlook on the sale of the cotton surpluses, which will accelerate at a rapid pace.

"A foreign policy based on the conduct of the one war we can win --the war against want -- will build not only the foundation of world peace, but also the foundation for a permanently secure agriculture in our own land."

ELECT A FULL TIME MAN

ELECT A YOUNG QUALIFIED MAN

To The Voters of Scott County

Some two months ago, I published an article giving you my qualifications for the office of County Collector. Also in this article, I challenged my opponents to do the same. I did this so you people could make a comparison of our qualifications and hire the best qualified man for the job. To date NONE of my opponents have published their qualifications. I wonder why? Could it be that when they really thought of what they were going to tell you that it was so little that it scared them. However all of them say they are Qualified. If they are, why don't they publish it so all of you can know what their Qualifications are. Could it be that my opponents are trying to deceive you into thinking they are Qualified just because they say they are. If they are trying to deceive you before they are elected what will they do if they are elected? There is a rumor going around that I was HIRED to run for this office. This is a FLAT LIE! I am running for this office on MY OWN and I am spending MY OWN MONEY. This way, if I am elected I will be obligated only to you, the people of this County. I am running because of the way our tax office is being handled. I think it is high time to get this office straightened out. If I am elected, I will do just that. I am fighting the Clique in this election and I ask you to help me to BEAT IT. If It is not good for our County or for you to have one man controlling our County Offices. I ask you to vote for me for County Collector and we will have a start on BUSTING the CLIQUE in Scott County.

figures improved farming? The incomes was raised from $2960 in 1960, to $4,200 in 1965, and we expect to raise it to $4600 in 1966, with a per capita income of $1600. The gap in farm income with other workers is closing rapidly. The long battle on cotton is bringing dividends, and you may rest assured it is not being felt in Congress by your farm leaders. They will battle to keep the 16 million acreage allotment and the good leadership you now have in your agricultural states, will help win the battle."

Haskell Holman, state auditor, gave count of state affairs in the afternoon session. "As your bookkeeper, I which to say your state is on a sound cash basis. Your executive branch of your governor, lieutenant governor, secretary, attorney general and myself, together with your legislative body, are your safeguards. We cannot expend when the cash is not there. Every expense item of $2000 or more must have a sealed bid. Your state has only one form of income, and that is income from the pockets of the taxpyers. If you want additional services, you must be willing to pay for it."

The closing speaker at the afternoon session was Rep. Paul Jones. "The bill on domestic payments now enacted a week ago will help the cotton growers, but some persons have the mistaken idea that if their cotton was plowed up they would receive a 9 cent payment and then plant to soybeans. The bill provides only when the cotton would not be planted. Those who plowed up their cotton were not complying with the intent of the law", he said.

"The law was made to apply to other crops as well. The Public Law 480 tightens the bill on foreign surplus and the foreign governments must prove their intent and reduce other commodities. A bill now in the House calls for community development, especially in rural areas, to help industry come in. I have supported the amendments where communities will take equal cooperation in their participation."

The banquet session was held at the high school gymnasium.

The principal speaker, Sen. George McGovern, was introduced by Sen. Symington.

"You have a fighting group of farm legislators from Missouri, and I am glad to assist them. Your midwest legislators are bringing their needs across to Congress, and success will be yours. Congress knows the well-being of agriculture to sound economy, and now speak out in great force, and the effectiveness on the American farmer.

"The American agriculture can be prosperous in the years ahead, if we have sound farm programs and a foreign policy which makes the proper use of our production to win the peace. The cotton producers have recognized the importance of world trade. Our surpluses for export depressed domestic farm prices.

"The realization of the effect of foreign markets and the need for our products has changed many attitudes. There is a growing need for a Food for Freedom program, with payments to bring returns up to an acceptable level and competitive in the world market.

"The challenging crisis for the rest of this century is the race between human consumption and population. This calls for expansion of food and fiber. Hunger is a serious problem in the world. It is more killing and maiming than gunfire, and a greater threat to future mankind than the nuclear bomb.

"Just last year I intoduced a bill in Congress to increase food and fiber assistance a half billion dollars a year for the next seven years. With all our food producing know how we could not reach the demand at our present rate by the year 2000. Neither our national security nor our moral and political situation in the world will permit us to turn our backs on the Number one problem of the last third of the 20th century."

"We have already seen a 10 per cent increase in rice acreage; a 15 per cent increase in wheat acreage, and a much better outlook on the sale of the cotton surpluses, which will accelerate at a rapid pace.

"A foreign policy based on the conduct of the one war we can win --the war against want -- will build not only the foundation of world peace, but also the foundation for a permanently secure agriculture in our own land."

ELECT A FULL TIME MAN

VETERAN QUALIFIED

Harold Hahn

ELECT A YOUNG QUALIFIED MAN

To The Voters of Scott County

Some two months ago, I published an article giving you my qualifications for the office of County Collector. Also in this article, I challenged my opponents to do the same. I did this so you people could make a comparison of our qualifications and hire the best qualified man for the job. To date NONE of my opponents have published their qualifications. I wonder why? Could it be that when they really thought of what they were going to tell you that it was so little that it scared them. However all of them say they are Qualified. If they are, why don't they publish it so all of you can know what their Qualifications are. Could it be that my opponents are trying to deceive you into thinking they are Qualified just because they say they are. If they are trying to deceive you before they are elected what will they do if they are elected? There is a rumor going around that I was HIRED to run for this office. This is a FLAT LIE! I am running for this office on MY OWN and I am spending MY OWN MONEY. This way, if I am elected I will be obligated only to you, the people of this County. I am running because of the way our tax office is being handled. I think It is high time to get this office straightened out. If I am elected, I will do just that. I am fighting the Clique in this election and I ask you to help me to BEAT IT. If It is not good for our County or for you to have one man controlling our County Offices. I ask you to vote for me for County Collector and we will have a start on BUSTING the CLIQUE in Scott County.

Respectfully Submitted
